Davis's Firing Tops Agenda For Cabinet

The cabinet went into an early-morning session today and it was understood one of the main items on the agenda was the firing of Jack Davis.

The 7 a.m. session got underway with Premier Bill Bennett and Attorney-General Garde Gardom still refusing comment on Wednesday's statement by Davis that he believes his firing stemmed from an investigation into airline tickets.

Gardom, who was slated to make an announcement today on the Davis probe after receiving a report from Deputy Attorney-General Richard Vogel, said he is unsure when he will get the report.

Davis was fired as minister of energy, transport and communications Monday.

Up until Wednesday, Davis, Gardom and Bennett had refused to say what the investigation involved.

"I believe that this investigation has to do with first class air tickets which I as a minister am given by government," Davis said in a prepared statement.

"I don't like travelling first class," he said. "I switch to economy class whenever I can."

Davis said the number of trips involved was eight or nine, and all were on government business.

The cost of a return air ticket between Victoria and Ottawa is $428 economy or $684 first class, a difference of $256.

The excursion rate, which requires a minimum stay of seven days and a maximum of 30 days is $245, a difference from the first class fare of $439.

Davis said he made the disclosure because of the distress and misery which reports of being locked out of his office and other speculation in the press is causing to his family.

Otherwise, the deputies and aides travel economy, he said.

A spokesman in the energy, transport and communications minister's office said normal procedure was followed in the purchase of tickets for Davis.

OTTAWA (CP) — T.C. Douglas, former leader of the New Democratic Party, is expected to remain in Ottawa General Hospital about one week after tests Wednesday for a stomach ulcer, his office said today.

Douglas, 73, MP for Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, "is doing quite well," a spokesman said.

PRE-ELECTION GOODIES?

Budget Down Next Monday, Commons Told

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The government will introduce a new budget next Monday night, Finance Minister Jean Chretien announced today.

The announcement came in the Commons after the weekly cabinet meeting, at which dates for a budget and for the coming federal election campaign were believed top priorities.

Opposition critics have already largely discounted the next budget, the first full budget for Chretien, as one likely to contain pre-election goodies that might serve as a platform for the federal Liberals to take to voters.

Finance officials who are putting the budget together say it will be a "bits and pieces" budget, which means it is unlikely to satisfy the widespread demands from both opposition MPs and from business and consumer groups for a broadly stimulatory budget with substantial tax cuts.

As the Commons question period opened, opposition MPs peppered Prime Minister Trudeau with questions about the weakened national economy, contrasting it with conditions 10 years ago when the Trudeau government came to power. Today marked Thursday's 10th year as prime minister. (See also Page 7.)

Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative finance critic, noted that 10 years ago the budgetary deficit was $20 a Canadian, but now has risen to $500 a Canadian, the number of unemployed has risen from 375,000 in 1968 to more than one million and inflation is up from four per cent to more than twice that level.

Trudeau dismissed Stevens' questions as "argumentative."

Later, he charged that Stevens and John Crosbie (PC—St. John's West) were making "biased interpretations" of economic statistics, and said the government has answers that it will put forward in the budget debate.

Crosbie said that when Trudeau became the nation's leader the deficit on current account, which includes interest payments for a growing national debt, was $97 million but it rose in 1977 to $4.2 billion. And the deficit on fully manufactured products last year of $11.6 billion compares with a deficit of $4.5 billion 10 years ago, Crosbie added.

Trudeau responded that the government has created 2.3 million jobs since he took power, faster than any other industrialized country.

Underlying the Commons exchanges was a common feeling that the announcement of an election date is

INFLATION . . ? WHAT'S THAT?

TORONTO (CP) — A Gallup poll commissioned by the anti-inflation board shows that 35 per cent of Canadians feel inflation has not hurt them at all.

The survey, conducted last December, showed that 11 per cent of 1,000 persons polled said they had been helped by inflation and 19 per cent said they did not know whether they had been hurt or helped.

"We were surprised that only an average of 65 per cent of the respondents felt their personal financial position had been hurt by inflation," L. C. Morrison, the AIB's director-general of communications, said Wednesday.

Morrison said the AIB commissioned the survey to discover the attitudes and perceptions of Canadians about inflation and to see what sort of communication job the board had done in explaining the problem.

The survey showed people who felt they had been helped by inflation listed higher earnings, a better standard of living, a need to cut spending and an increase in real estate values among the advantages gained from inflation, Morrison said.

Those who said they were hurt by inflation cited a decline in spending power as their chief problem.

Morrison said the poll showed that 23 per cent — mostly the young and professionals — felt the AIB has done its job in helping them understand the causes of inflation.

Survey results show labor and wages were most blamed for inflation, while business and profits were considered the second most common cause. Government spending ranked third.

Thirteen per cent said the public lifestyle caused inflation and 12 per cent blamed a "buy today, pay tomorrow" ethic.

The survey also showed that older people blame unions more and business less for inflation, while younger people tend to blame business and labor equally.

PWA Provided Free Service for Socreds

Alberta Transport Minister Hugh Horner confirmed Wednesday in Edmonton that Pacific Western Airlines carried more than three tons of Social Credit campaign material free of charge during the 1975 British Columbia election.

New Democratic Party Leader Grant Notley disclosed the action in the Alberta legislature earlier Wednesday, saying that while the airline, owned by the Alberta government, gave free service to the Social Credit party, the NDP had to pay for the same service.

Horner told reporters outside the legislature that Notley had proved his case, and quipped: "Obviously it did the trick."

But in B.C., top Social Credit party and government officials denied any knowledge of free service from the Alberta government-owned airline.

Notley said in the Alberta legislature the material, for which he said normal charges would have reached $1,000, was carried by PWA for B.C. Social Credit candidates including three who are now cabinet ministers.

The lone NDP member in the Alberta legislature questioned Horner about the matter and tabled a sheaf of invoices he said showed PWA had carried the material free.

While Notley was making his charges in the Alberta legislature, Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminster) tabled copies of the documents in the B.C. legislature alleging PWA had given the Social Credit free air space for its campaign material.

All Social Credit party officials interviewed in B.C. said they had no knowledge of the service.

However, while Cocke was making the disclosures, several government members hooted and laughed.

Ray Loewen (SC—Burnaby-Edmonds) said: "They (PWA) know leadership. There should have been more (free service)."

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Cocke was complaining because "they (PWA) didn't like you."

Cocke replied: "I thought you'd have the decency to be ashamed."

McDERMOTT

McDermott Wins Top Labor Job

QUEBEC (CP) — Dennis McDermott was today elected president of the 2.3-million-member Canadian Labor Congress (CLC), replacing 64-year-old Joe Morris, a former British Columbia logger who has devoted his life to the labor movement since the late 1930s.

McDermott, 55, was unopposed in moving to the top labor spot after 10 years as Canadian director of the United Auto Workers. Morris decided to step down after four turbulent years as CLC president.

"I happen to believe that my time has come along and perhaps I can do the job as well as anybody else," McDermott said in an interview.

Publicly, the styles of Morris and McDermott are as different as day and night.

Morris has a low-key, slow-talking public image, while McDermott has a flair for provocative statements and fiery language.

But their philosophies are similar.

Mortgage Rate Rising

The mortgage interest rate is going up and the news for Victoria home buyers will get worse before it gets better, Canadian Real Estate Association director Eric Charman said today.

The rate is going to 10.5 per cent from 10.25 and further increases can be expected.

"We are into a period of higher rates. It could be quite a while before it is down to 10.25 per cent again," Charman said.

The mortgage rate could be at 10.75 or even 11 per cent by summer.

Charman said he expects the Bank of Canada soon will announce its third increase in its rate, forcing another round of rate increases for banks and other lending institutions. The Bank of Canada rate was 7.5 per cent on March 8 but went to 8 per cent on March 9 and then was increased to 8.5 per cent on April 3.

This forces up all other interest rates by a proportional amount.

Mortgages, however, had resisted the first bank rate increase because of the surplus of mortgage funds in most Canadian cities.

This surplus is particularly heavy in Victoria, where there has been little residential action during the past 12 months.

If the full effect of the bank rate increases had been reflected in the mortgage rate, it would have increased to 11.25 per cent by now. Financial companies have tried to avoid boosting the mortgage rate because of the low demand but with a full point being added to their cost of borrowing, they have had to pass along at least part of the cost.

Some companies have already announced increases in their prime mortgage rate to 10.5 per cent and others are expected to follow suit within a week. This means conventional mortgages will be going out at 10.5 to 10.75 per cent, depending upon the property.

He said the Victoria real estate market had shown signs of recovery this year and will continue to be fairly good, although not as strong as it would have been if the interest rate had stayed at 10.25 per cent.

Seatbelt Charge Dismissed

Greater Victoria's first charge of failing to wear a seat belt was dismissed today by Judge William Ostler.

Arthur Wagensveld, 17, was charged by Central Saanich police.

The case was thrown out by Ostler after he ruled the Crown had failed to prove the accused was not wearing the seatbelt while driving.

Wagensveld testified he had pulled into a driveway and had switched off his engine and unbuckled his seatbelt.

He said he was moving over to the passenger's side to get out because of a faulty lock on the driver's side when he noticed a police car with its lights flashing on the road.

Wagensveld said he shifted back into the driver's seat because he assumed the police wanted to talk to him but did not re-fasten his seatbelt.

Show-Off Survives Fall from 23rd Floor

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Patrick Kouchnire was attempting to scare or impress his girl-friend when he fell from the window ledge of her 23-storey apartment into a swimming pool Wednesday night.

A hospital spokesman said Kouchnire, 24, was in stable condition with internal injuries and there were no broken bones. Falling into about a metre of water in the shallow end of the pool helped break the 64-metre plunge.

"He must have kicked against the building when he fell," a police spokesman said. "He landed in the pool, which is eight feet from the building."

Police said the fall from the apartment tower was accidental. The girl-friend tried to help Kouchnire get back inside the apartment but he slipped and fell.

Police said the man's shoes came off at the edge of the pool but there were no visible bruises when he was pulled from the water.

Indian Land Claims Boon to Lawyers

OTTAWA (CP) — Lawyers and consultants are becoming principal beneficiaries in efforts to negotiate native land claims settlements, federal figures indicate.

The figures, tabled recently in the Commons, show that millions of dollars are being paid to lawyers and consultants hired by native groups to assist with claims against the federal and provincial governments.

In northern Quebec alone, where the Crees and Inuit have signed the James Bay claims agreement, incomplete statistics show legal and consulting fees of $1.2 million. That is more than one-quarter of $4.3 million the natives borrowed from Ottawa to pursue their claims.

Those figures are not totals, however. They do not include loans or legal and consulting fees for the last 12 months, the period during which there were hectic negotiations to make the agreement final.

A breakdown shows the Inuit received $1.6 million in loans during the four-year period ended March 31, 1977, and paid $402,000 of that to lawyers and consultants. The Cree borrowed $2.7 million in the three-year period ended on the same date and paid $843,000 in legal and consulting fees.

Manitoba MP David Orlikow, the man who requested the figures, says northern Manitoba Indians paid $535,000 in similar fees in their compensation claim against the giant Nelson River power project.

"I just think that whatever the merits of trying to settle land claims, and whatever the final results . . . the lawyers will have made a bonanza," Orlikow said in an interview this week.

He requested the figures from the government to get some idea how much Indian money is being channelled to lawyers.

The figures, prepared by the Indian affairs department, really do not show the full extent of fees being paid. For instance, they show the Indian Brotherhood of the Northwest Territories paying $50,000 in fees, but do not say for what period. There also are no figures for the N.W.T. Metis Association or for the Inuit Tapirisat, the national Eskimo brotherhood.

Says Orlikow: "I don't mind when the lawyers do extremely well when their clients also are relatively well off. It bothers me that lawyers do extremely well when their clients are very poor people like the native people."

Bank St. School Parents Join in Closure Protest

The protesting parent syndrome which dominated five public school closure hearings during the past month was present again Wednesday night at Bank Street primary school.

Parents asked Greater Victoria school administrators why they suggest closing the school when it has a good academic reputation and operates economically.

The meeting was the last scheduled by the board before it makes a decision next week.

All six elementary schools have been singled out for possible closure or space reduction in September as a result of rapidly declining enrolment in the district.

Bank Street's tiny student population with only 67 pupils in kindergarten to Grade 4, makes it a likely target for closure.

The board has already passed a motion recommending closure at the end of this school year.

Bank Street enrolment has been dropping because parents don't want to place their children in a school that could close at any time, administrators and trustees were told at the hearing.

The enrolment decline is also due to misinformation circulated by the district, the parents said.

According to district superintendent Allan Stables enrolment is open to children living outside the official attendence area.

But the parents said they have been told the boundaries are closed.

A real estate guidebook produced at the meeting lists the school as having closed boundaries and so does a school district planning report.

Bank Street teachers recommended the school be designated an alternative program and stay where it is.

A special oral communication program using team teaching methods is very effective and could not be moved to another school without damaging it, the teachers said in a brief presented at the hearing.

In this program the pupils are taught by more than one teacher and are encouraged to help create the educational situation through group discussion.

Dr. Alan Hughes, speaking on behalf of the parents, said research done by the University of Victoria indicates the program, within a two-year time frame, develops above average ability in students with language skills well below average.

School trustees have all approved the program and know that moving it would cause a major disruption, Hughs said.

On April 12 and 13, the board will discuss the briefs presented at the six public hearings and make closure decisions. The meetings are scheduled for the media centre conference room.

Saanich Plans Farmland Study

Saanich planning department has been asked to prepare a study dealing with the whole question of farmland protection policies and the criteria for including lands within the Agricultural Land Reserve.

Mayor Mel Couvelier says the report will be considered by the lands, planning and housing committee before council makes a decision on the status of nine parcels in the Blenkinsop Valley which had been proposed for ALR designation.

Council tabled the proposals in late February after a public hearing at which the property owners concerned strongly opposed their inclusion in the reserve.

The residents claimed that the 51 acres is largely rock, gravel, clay and poor-quality soil unsuited to economic agricultural use.

But municipal planner Gil Laurenson says the report, among other things, will consider whether ALR lands should have "support areas" or buffer zones around them.

NIGHT FLIGHTS OKAYED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Air Canada said Wednesday it has received Canadian transport commission approval of its Vancouver-Toronto nighthawk flights and the first of 26 will take off here at 1:25 a.m. June 15.

The saving for as many as 289 passengers on each afterhours, no-reservation flight will be the difference between the $202 return Vancouver-Toronto fare and comparable book-ahead charter fares of $232.

Officials of the airline and Vancouver International Airport have been squabbling for weeks about the impropriety of contravening an understanding unofficially banning flights between midnight and 6 a.m.

"Maybe as far as Ottawa is concerned it's all settled, but it isn't finalized here," said a local transport ministry official. "There's nothing in writing."

To keep noise to a minimum the airline promises to use the quiet Lockheed L-1011s, reduce power after takeoff, and wherever possible take off over water. Landing approaches would also be made over the sea.

Quebec Army A Joke

ST. JEAN, Que. (CP) — A slogan that has been turning up on the fronts of some cars here has caused a few red faces at the Canadian Forces base: Armee du Quebec (Quebec Army).

Only rear licence plates are being issued from this year and all sorts of messages are appearing on front fenders, from J'aime ma femme (I love my wife) to political slogans.

But when a forces member turned up for work with the Armee du Quebec plate adorning his car, he was promptly asked to remove it.

"One of the young guys did it as a joke," explained base commander Colonel Andre Cimon. "He didn't realize that the plate referred to a sensitive issue and that it could be given the wrong interpretation. Once it was explained, he understood."

Ombudsman Proposed

OTTAWA (CP) — A federal ombudsman with the power to investigate allegations of administrative injustice would be created by legislation introduced in the Commons Wednesday.

The ombudsman would be able to investigate public complaints on actions or inactions of government departments and agencies, including the RCMP.

He would handle cases only when members of the public had been unable to get satisfaction from normal complaint-hearing channels.

Under the bill, the ombudsman would have the power to enter federal government offices, look at government files and summon government officials as witnesses.

He would be able to force government officials to produce documents and testify under oath, but his recommendations would not be binding on government officials or institutions.

However, if the government did not comply with the remedy suggested by the ombudsman, he could report this to Parliament in his annual report.

The bill was one of several that have been introduced by the government since the end of the Easter Parliamentary recess this week that are unlikely to make any advance toward becoming law.

The government is widely expected to call a June election and to dissolve Parliament this month.

The ombudsman could refuse to investigate a complaint if he felt it was frivolous, or the complainant had not exhausted other avenues of appeal, or if the person let more than a year go by without doing anything about the alleged injustice himself.

There would be no charge for the ombudsman's services.

CITY PIGEONS GET HOTFOOT

The hotfoot treatment will be given as part of a $54,000 spring clean-up, council's finance committee decided today.

The project will see a $15,000 exterior painting job, new roofing installed at a cost of $37,000 and application of a bird preventive to all ledges of the building.

The bird preventive is a paste-like material that gives pidgeons and other feathered creatures hot feet and costs costs $2,000 to purchase and install.

The clean-up project should be completed by May 31.

The committee rejected a second proposal for renovations that would have cost $89,500.

Searchers Recover One Body

The body of a crewman missing since Easter from the U.S. fishing vessel Nancy L was recovered Wednesday.

Capt. Frank Gavin, of the rescue co-ordination centre, said the body, dressed in an immersion suit, was found in Queen Charlotte Sound about 30 miles west of Price Island and was taken to Bella Bella for positive identification.

The wreck of the newly-launched Nancy L was found earlier on Calvert Island, scene of a beach search Sunday.

Oceanographer Cousteau Urges Supertanker Ban

Times News Services

PARIS — Oceanographer Jacques-Yves Cousteau says supertankers should be banned and replaced by smaller ships to avoid such disastrous oil spills as the wreck of the 65-million-gallon Amoco Cadiz off the coast of Brittany.

"We should forbid the supertankers and multiply the smaller tankers," Cousteau said in an interview. "I would prefer to have three smaller spills than one big one."

Cousteau was critical of the French government's handling of the March 17 spill, which fouled one of France's most productive fishing grounds as well as a region popular with tourists.

"The French government seems only interested in hiding the effects so the tourist season can carry on," he said. "They'll put the clean sand over the dirty sand which means the coast will remain infected for many years to come. It's covering up, not curing."

"The oyster beds, the shellfish and the fishermen's livelihood will suffer for many years," he said. "Weeds will replace algae. The fish will be replaced by rugged, primitive fish, and an island sanctuary for rare birds has already been completely wiped out. That's just the start."

The 67-year-old marine biologist called for a world ocean authority to supervise coastal shipping and mining with strict regulations similar to those governing international air traffic.

Meanwhile, a tanker carrying 11 million gallons of crude oil wriggled itself free of a mudbank at the mouth of the Mississippi River and headed toward upriver refineries Wednesday, a U.S. Coast Guard official said.

He said the tanker used its own pumps to shift its cargo, raising the side which was stuck in the mud and refloating the ship.

The American-registered tanker, which had taken on its load of Alaska oil from a supertanker on the west coast of Panama, went aground Wednesday while entering Southwest Pass, the chief pass into the Mississippi.

The official said the ship's hull was not punctured and none of the oil leaked out.

INQUEST SLATED

LADYSMITH — A coroner's inquiry will be held into the death Tuesday of a Ladysmith man whose car knocked the front wheels off a loaded logging truck on Trans-Canada Highway.

The driver, John Crocker, 56, died instantly and his wife Mabel, 39, and son Christopher, 11, received leg and hip injuries in the crash at 4:40 p.m. in Ladysmith. A third passenger, Joseph Voria, 27, of Galiano Island, was removed from the wreckage with chest injuries and all were taken to Ladysmith Hospital, then to Nanaimo Regional Hospital.

RCMP said Crocker's northbound car appeared to be out of control when it went into the southbound lane and struck a loaded MacMillan Bloedel logging truck driven by Stanley Hull, 37, of Duncan, who did not require medical treatment.

An officer said the impact that demolished Crocker's rented auto pushed the front wheel assembly from under the heavy truck.

Pacemaker Aiding Brezhnev

WASHINGTON (AP) — Carter administration officials believe Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, whose frequent disappearances from public view have raised questions about his health, has been given an electronic heart pacemaker.

Brezhnev dropped out of public view last Dec. 12 and was not seen until mid-January. At the time, it was speculated that he had influenza although the official report said only that he was in hospital with an undisclosed ailment.

U.S. officials believe that it was during this period that the pacemaker was implanted.

Brezhnev, 71, is currently on a tour of Siberia, visiting sites near the Chinese border.

There has been considerable speculation in recent months about Brezhnev's health. The Soviet leader has problems walking, smokes heavily, becomes fatigued and has been absent from public events for long periods without explanation.

Four Israelis Slain Palestinians Claim

BEIRUT (UPI) — Palestinians said today their guerrillas killed four Israeli soldiers and captured one in a shoot-out south of Tyre.

Palestine Liberation Organization officials said the incident took place at Ras al Ain, about 3 miles south of the Palestinian-controlled port. They said the PLO planned to exchange the four bodies and the prisoner for Palestinian prisoners held by the Israelis.

Three soldiers were killed and their vehicle captured Wednesday. This morning, a fourth Israeli was found dead and another was taken prisoner, PLO officials said.

Israeli officials said the incident was the most serious violation of Israel's unilaterally declared cease-fire since it went into effect March 21.

The Israeli military command, confirming the incident, said three of its soldiers were killed in a guerrilla attack on a car that drove beyond Israeli lines near Tyre in southern Lebanon.

A spokesman said two passengers in the car were injured but managed to return to Israeli-held territory and two were missing — one of them a civilian.

Israeli gunners retaliated Wednesday night by heavy shelling of Palestinian positions near Tyre. Witnesses said there was also Israeli shelling in the Tyre area today.

Reports from Tyre said Israeli gunners pounding positions around Tyre with dozens of phosphorous shells.

Reports from Israel said at least one civilian was among the two that had been unaccounted for Wednesday, and Palestinian sources in Tyre said journalists coming from Israel had been in the car.

It was only the third time that the prize had gone to England. Canadians have won it 13 times, with the same number going to the United States.

Ireland won it once.

Three tickets will be drawn on each horse entered in the Lincoln. First-place prize will be worth $172,000; second, $43,200 and third, $21,600.

Leftists Held In Moro Raid

ROME (AP) — Four leftist extremists were arrested today in a raid on a beachfront villa near Naples in the continuing three-week hunt for former premier Aldo Moro and his kidnappers.

Police said the villa contained arms, ammunition and leftist literature and they were trying to determine if those arrested were connected with the Red Brigades, Moro's urban guerrilla kidnappers.

Others raids were staged in the Naples area and the northern port city of Genoa.

In Genoa, police also questioned the imprisoned leftwing extremist Giovanni de Vita, 29, reputed to be the leader of a mass jailbreak plan agents said they discovered.

Three weeks after the kidnapping, investigators still report no major breakthrough in the case.

Moro, 61, president of the Christian Democrat party, was ambushed and kidnapped in a Rome suburb in an assault in which five of his bodyguards were slain.

The Red Brigades, whose founders are on trial in Turin on sedition charges, have claimed responsibility for the kidnapping and say they are subjecting Moro to a "people's trial" for the alleged anti-proletariat policies of his party.

In a letter attributed to him, Moro has said he is being held as a political prisoner and urged an exchange with jailed terrorist as the only sure way to gain his freedom.

The Christian Democrats have rejected the proposal, but the door is still believed open to a private deal by Moro's family and friends to buy his freedom.

Legal Advertising

The B.C. Law Society has got itself into what is commonly known as a cleft stick over the cases of Don Jabour and Vic Stephens and their advertising of their legal services.

Stephens now having been "convicted" of conduct unbecoming a lawyer for the heinous crime of talking to reporters and open-line show hosts about the new type of legal clinic he had opened up in Vancouver, the Benchers can scarcely do less to Jabour whose advertising was much more blatant in that he actually hung a neon sign outside his office and paid money to have his rates and services made public.

If the Benchers now find Jabour not guilty of the same thing, they can hardly help but be accused of inconsistency in their judgments; moreover, they will have opened the door wide open to any and all advertising by lawyers with no restrictions on it at all.

If, on the other hand, they find Jabour guilty, they will be persisting with a standard of conduct that clearly does not have the support of the majority of the public and that may indeed be against a federal law, the Combines Act.

Testimony given at Jabour's hearing would appear to have made it impeccably clear that the Law Society will not for long be able to continue its present policy of absolutely-no-advertising-under-any-circumstances. But that does not mean that the pendulum should swing entirely the other way, allowing lawyers to say virtually anything in print. The Law Society is quite right in saying that careful consideration needs to be given to such matters as the qualifications a lawyer would need to have before he could advertise himself as a specialist in a certain field.

Thankfully we are not in the position of having to make the Benchers' decision for them. But we do hope they will find a solution that will not punish Jabour for daring to take on one of law's sacred cows but still will maintain consistency and, most important of all, will lay down clear guidelines for future advertising by lawyers.

On Tuesday we inquired in this space about Victoria city council's rationale for its grass-cutting policies. Why, we asked, did the city regularly cut some boulevards but not others, in some places cut the grass on only one side of the street, and in some places keep a carefully-manicured boulevard in front of a weedy vacant lot?

The city parks maintenance department was pleased to answer our query by explaining to us that the policy, which on the surface seems quite irrational, actually made considerable sense when it was started some 70 years ago.

At that time, we were told, homeowners were given the opportunity of co-operating with the city in developing boulevards in front of their homes. Under the scheme, those who chose to enter the plan would have the boulevards built and maintained by the city, but they would pay part of the costs of upkeep through extra taxes — a forerunner, it seems, of the local improvement area concept.

However, not all the city homeowners chose to enter the scheme, leaving some pieces of boulevard unprotected by the plan. This led to two separate categories of boulevard being created — parks boulevards and public works boulevards. This distinction prevails to the present day.

Parks boulevards are those bordering land which was covered by the landowner-city agreements. The city still keeps up regular maintenance on these boulevards (even if the land adjoining has since become a vacant lot or a rubbish dump) as well as it can afford and the owners of the land still pay extra taxes for the service. They are called parks boulevards because maintenance is done through the parks department.

Public works boulevards are those bordering public land or land which was never covered. The city cuts the grass on these boulevards only once or twice a year; generally speaking, it is considered to be the responsibility of the landowners of the adjoining property to maintain the boulevards in reasonable condition. They are called public works boulevards because whatever maintenance is done is done through the public works department.

Sometime when the city has nothing better to do, it might be worthwhile for them to update this policy to bring it more into line with 1970s thinking and, we would hope, to make it more efficient as well.

Referenda: Many Objections

OTTAWA — The "public referendums" bill may be useful contingency legislation but, despite its complexities, it probably has rather less significance than meets the eye.

There are several reasons for suspecting this. One is that the government sponsoring the bill makes no secret of its distaste for referenda (in reality plebiscites although the distinction has been blurred in modern usage). The prime minister has been frank about this as Marc Lalonde was on Monday. It may be that this aversion goes back to the wartime plebiscite on conscription which had the immediate effect of aggravating rather than resolving the government's problems.

In any case, the objections are substantial. We elect governments to make decisions and those appealing for our support usually parade their determination to make the often hard choices required for our national welfare. For those entrusted with the responsibility to refer the issues back to us is manifestly a cop-out. It is not surprising in the circumstances that the proposed legislation rules out consultation by referendum except in constitutional cases.

Create Confusion

Another difficulty is that the submission of a question to voters is very likely to create confusion and dangerous resentments. The importance of the referendum and the duty of voting will certainly be emphasized by both sides. People will go to the polls persuaded that their decision will be momentous and historic. In fact, it may be no decision at all.

As Lalonde reiterated this week, the result of a referendum will be "morally binding on the government." It will not however, be legally binding and may not be regarded as morally binding on parliament. We do not know at this point what sort of parliament or parliaments we will have during the life of the bill. We do not know whether they will be commanded by majorities or divided among minority groups.

Despite the curious wording of King's plebiscite, many felt that they had voted for conscription; indeed, that may have been their intent. Thus there was some feeling in the aftermath that the government had not kept faith with the voters.

The contingency which has caused this government to introduce this measure is, avowedly, the threatened provincial referendum in Quebec. What is considered dangerous is the possibility that this may be rigged in favor of the separatists by resort to loaded or ambiguous questions and also by the restrictive conditions imposed on campaigning.

Since a "model" bill invites comparisons, it is hoped in Ottawa that the proposed legislation will work to keep Rene Levesque on the straight and narrow path. At the least, it outlaws maybes, insisting that any question, even one involving alternative courses, must permit only of Yes or No answers.

But there is also the possibility of a federal vote in fair conditions in a provincial arena. As "model" legislation, the bill does not, of course, single out Quebec. It speaks of "any question relating to the constitution of Canada or possible change in the constitution of Canada" which is "of sufficient importance to warrant obtaining the opinion of electors on that question." This is slightly ironic; we have had some quite important amendments (unemployment insurance, old age pensions, western resources etc.) but nothing in our past was important enough to warrant such treatment.

It also specifies, this being the heart of the matter, that the question may be put to the electors of Canada or of "one or more provinces."

There have been suggestions that consultation by referendum might by a means of promoting constitutional reform. The bill would clearly permit this. By inclusion of the "one or more", the model also mirrors the constitution since various provinces now occupy in certain matters special positions arising from the terms of entry into Confederation.

But the government insists that it has no present plans for proceeding in this fashion. While theoretically attractive, it might not be very helpful in practice. An obvious difficulty is that the constitutional reform schemes of recent years have all consisted of packages involving a variety of propositions: rights, vetoes, delegation, the Senate, the supreme court, patriation and so on. To vote Yes or No on separatism would be relatively easy. To appraise a package would certainly be much more difficult. Voters, approving some parts, disliking others might end by voting Yes out of resignation or No out of caution. The outcome in such circumstances might well be a debate about the meaning of the results.

Excluding the separatist issue, the "one or more" provision may be of little significance. For propositions warranting consultation are unlikely to involve the marginal special status matters. It will be generally difficult to argue that a single provincial interest is involved and any attempt to secure a local response to a broader question would be a questionable tactic which might seem improper to voters.

Only One Contingency

Despite the amplitude of the measure, therefore, it is probable that Levesque is, and will remain, the only contingency on the horizon.

It is the government's hope, as indicated earlier by Trudeau, that the bill, as an insurance measure, will have general support. While some details may be questioned, the broad principles will presumably be acceptable to the various parties, although perhaps not to all members. The provisions governing debate, for example, would appear to be written with the clear intent of avoiding controversy.

The forty hour rules means, in effect, that the House is assured of approximately two weeks of debating time to consider any question to be placed before voters. This seems ample given the facts that committee examination will not be necessary and that the matter will then go to the Senate which may, if it chooses, consider the matter in the same unhurried fashion.

To assist the members in their deliberations, Lalonde has issued a well documented study of referenda conducted in six jurisdictions. The one which seems most relevant to our circumstances is the case of Western Australia which sought in the 1930s to secede from the federation. It is of interest that the secessionists won but nothing happened. While not perhaps intended, this is at least a reminder that constitutional changes are not effected by votes alone but must follow certain courses and survive various risks including in our case the marked tendency of local electors to return balky premiers with a disconcerting tendency to reject packages, even with the most attractive wrapping.

BRUCE HUTCHISON

A Warning from the Bank

Unlike its sober original building, the enlarged Bank of Canada on Wellington Street, Ottawa, is a glass tower of ostentatious and somewhat repulsive design, a symbol which totally misrepresents the human beings within it. For the men and women who work there are quiet, reserved, almost invisible and their business is beyond the public's understanding.

Consequently, the annual report of G.K. Bouey, the bank's governor and one of nation's most valuable servants, is not the sort of light reading you would take on a holiday weekend. In fact, it is exceedingly dull, as it must be, and not many Canadians will read it. But amid the bewildering array of figures and banking jargon one phrase of plain English shines out like a red traffic light, as if Bouey, the discreet money manager, had permitted himself a flash of reckless candor. "Our past," he writes, "has been catching up with us."

Few Opposed

The price of our mistakes over the last decade, and longer, is recorded by the statistics flowing into the bank from every corner of the world. The official excuses for these mistakes and the promises to correct them flew daily off Parliament Hill nearby. The past is indeed catching up with us.

It cannot be explained, however, in statistical terms because the past was, above all, a psychological experience, the fault of the nation entire, not merely its elected persons. While the politicians are blamed for everything, of course, few private citizens opposed the lavish budgets of earlier years, the huge deficits, the state's free handouts, the vain hope of something for nothing. If some voices were raised against this folly they were drowned in a general chorus of welcome.

In the past now catching up with us the central bank was not blameless. It created too much money and inflated the medium of exchange. But, as the creature of the government, it had to obey a master who was afraid to pay the nation's running costs out of honest taxes and, short of cash, forced the bank to bail it out.

Over and over again the bank's governors questioned policies always justified by the theories of the late Maynard Keynes and always grossly distorted in his name. To the bank's warnings the collective ear of Parliament Hill was chronically deaf but it should be able to hear Bouey's latest danger signal. danger signal.

In language exceedingly rough for a central banker he says "no one should look to monetary policy to accommodate inflationary increases in costs and prices through excessive monetary expansion." Translated into familiar idiom, Bouey says the bank will create as much money as it thinks the economy can absorb and no more.

Having ordered the printing press to slow down, Bouey hopes that the peak of inflation and the nadir of economic growth are behind us — provided that we have learned from the past and not otherwise. Is his optimism actually warranted? The final answer to that question must come not from the bank but from the ordinary citizen and it will decide our future.

Neither Bouey, the practical economist, nor the wisest mystical soothsayer, can know the answer because it does not depend on governments, banks or the laws of arithmetic. It depends on the behavior of the individual Canadians known as the public and also on worldwide forces far outside Canada's control.

If the public continues to demand more than the economy produces, if governments continue to satisfy these demands, if the nation continues to buy more than it sells, piling up debt at home and abroad, regardless of cost, then Bouey's hopes must collapse. So, in the end, will the national currency and the people's savings.

Depends on Public

Assuming that the people decide not to repeat the past, and that the world economy does not lurch into a real depression, what are we to make of the bank's new figures and all the other portents?

The best experts disagree on their meaning but to the layman they can only mean that the next decade will be very different from the last, that if the worst follies are behind us, the long postwar boom is finished.

Given the state of the nation and the world alike, we must accept a lower rate of economic growth and a standard of living high by any measurement but not nearly as high as we had expected in our days of mass euphoria. If we refuse to recognize such obvious imperatives, preferring the old fantasies, we shall make the future even more foolish and destructive than the past.

Home Care

While there is much to be commended in the principle of home care it is a pity that this government, as in everything else it has done, bases the whole program on saving money rather than on human needs.

Anyone in the know will confirm that they really have a minimum of interest in the suffering people and a gigantic interest in the taxpayer.

The principle is a good one in some cases but when disabled and handicapped get only a few hours a week assistance when they need almost constant care, many would be infinitely better off in extended care homes.

Believe me when I say that, as administered by this government, a good idea is being prostituted as election propaganda and surplus budgeting. — P. Simpson, 2526 Forbes Street.

Crosswalk Closed

Next time you drive along Foul Bay Road between Oak Bay Avenue and Fort Street, you may notice that the controlled crosswalk has gone.

The Greater Victoria School Board has harassed Bank Street School for years with threats of closure, telling newcomers to the area that the school is closed or that its boundaries are closed. Although this is untrue, the boundaries are listed as closed with the real estate board. The so-called boundary is Foul Bay Road. Now that the controlled crosswalk is gone, children from the area known as Poet's Corner cross that street at their own peril.

Is the school board responsible for this outrage, or has the city just made a mistake? Couldn't it have stayed there at least until school gets out in June? Whatever the answer, please drive along Foul Bay Road with care. The child you kill may be mine. — Judy Chudley, 1767 Elgin Road.

Bicycle Safety

Many people riding bicycles do not realize that they have the same rights and responsibilities when riding a bicycle that drivers of motor vehicles have under the Motor Vehicle Act. In the context of safety, too great an emphasis cannot be placed on the responsibility of the person operating a bicycle. The bicyclist is responsible for not only obeying all rules and regulations applicable to the operation of motor vehicles on streets and highways, but also for the rights of pedestrians in traffic.

A person who operates a bicycle and contravenes a section of the Motor Vehicle Act, is subject to being charged and convicted of an offence under the act. This further portrays the responsibility that a person assumes when operating a bicycle.

An inordinate number of bicycle riders are violating a number of the rules of the road. One of the most dangerous violations is the failure of the bicycle rider to stop at STOP signs. Motorists expect the cyclist to come to a complete stop and failure to do so results in a potentially dangerous situation. In a collision with a motor vehicle the bicyclist is most likely to be injured, probably seriusly injured.

Bicycling can be a safe and enjoyable, not to say a healthy means of travelling if we obey the rules of the road and ride the bicycle properly. Failure to follow the rules can, and frequently does, result in a mishap. Because of the vulnerability, the bicyclist receives the brunt of the damage.

The Capital Region Safety Council urges all bicyclists and all parents of bicyclists to ensure that the rules of the road and practices of safe bicycling are followed.

Display care, caution and courtesy! Drive carefully! — K.J. Wyatt, Capital Region Safety Council, 1767 Island Highway.

No Curfew

I am writing to express my view on juvenile curfews. I disagree with having curfews for Victoria. Why should the kids who are going out to have a reasonably good time have to be in at a certain time of night because of those few who may commit vandalism and other misdemeanors?

What are you going to do if you put a curfew in Victoria and the kids still go out? No one wants to be able to go to a party, dance, etc. which starts at 7:30 and has to end before 10! What about babysitters? What will he or she do?

You should think of all the possibilities. What is the world coming to? Next year something else, maybe? You can't do this. Kids need their freedom just like some adults do. Not all children will destroy property. There are some good kids! You just have to give children (just like adults) fair and reasonable chances. Some adults aren't any better than some children. — Claudette Doracher, 1294 Camrose Crescent.

Foreign Aid

The news media dramatize the violence, kidnapping etc. right out of proportion, thereby brainwashing the masses, making them virtually ignore the real issues like the recent UN report that although there is enough food in the world to feed everybody, inadequate and unjust distribution has increased the world's hungry from 400 million in 1971 to 455 million in 1974 — i.e. 55 million more destined to slow death due to starvation. We often wonder as to how rational our priorities, values and attitudes are.

It is so very unfortunate that Ottawa has decreased the aid to the developing countries from 0.56 per cent of our GNP in 1976 to 0.46 per cent in 1977, thereby going further away from achieving the target of 0.7 per cent of the GNP, set by the UN.

Please write to Prime Minister Trudeau to increase our aid to 0.7 per cent of our GNP and that our aid must go to the poorest of the poor nations and the poorest of the poor of those nations, who are indeed the victims of unjust social and economic order in the world. To live is to love, share and care. — Ms. Hansi Bish, 404-360 Douglas Street.

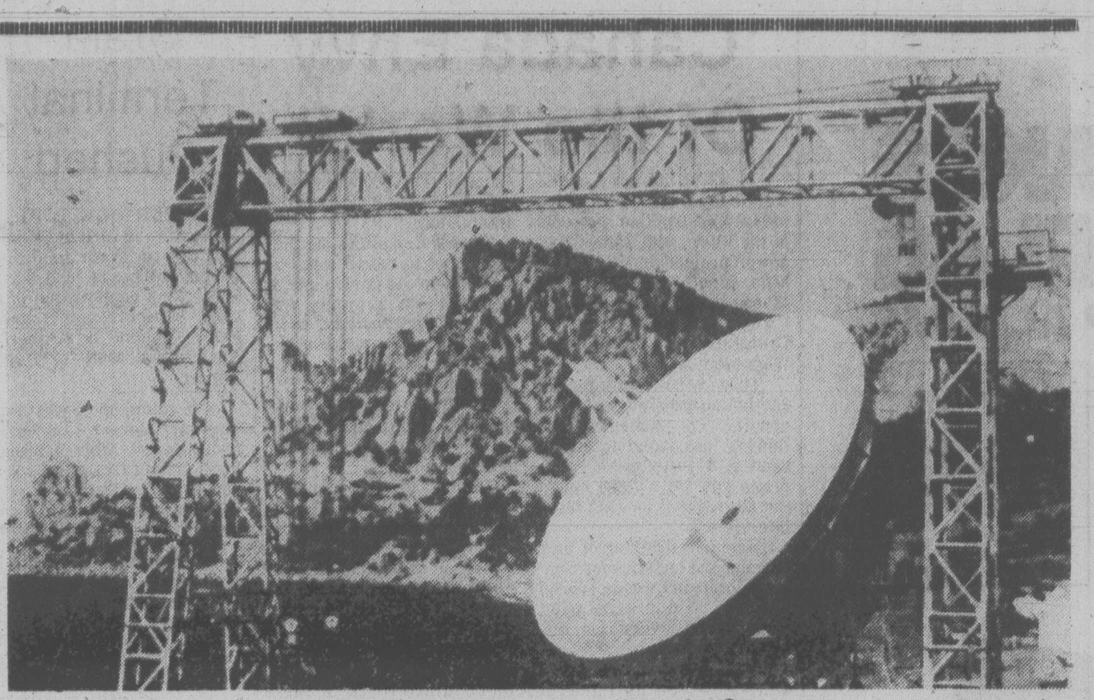
LAURENCE MARKS



Is anybody out there listening?

The United States is proposing to spend $14 million in the next seven years looking for intelligent life in the universe.

This item in President Carter's budget has provoked a predictable bout of merriment in Washington. Senator William Proxmire, the respected liberal Democrat from Wisconsin, has awarded the National Air and Space Administration his Golden Fleece award (for fleecing the taxpayers).

A group of distinguished astronomers, however, who were in town the other day, took the opportunity to explain what they have in mind. It may or may not be successful — astronomers argue that a negative result would be as significant as a positive one — but it is anything but a joke.

SETI (the Search for Extra-Terrestrial Intelligence) is a profoundly serious scientific endeavor. It has nothing to do with flying saucers (or unidentified flying objects). If cerebral lumps of green blancmange with antennae are already floating around the countryside conversing in Esperanto with members of village UFO-spotting societies, then there's not much point in searching fo intelligent life out in the milky way.

SETI starts from the premise that, if carbon-based life could arrive spontaneously and evolve into higher forms on earth, there is a statistical probability that it has done so elsewhere in the universe. According to some scientists, there may be as many as a million advanced civilizations in our own galaxy alone.

Where do we start looking? The Americans propose to begin with existing equipment, concentrating first on stars with similar characteristics to those of the sun, then broadening the search to an all-sky swing.

Nobody is yet certain that other stars than our own have planets. If they do, we can't at present detect them from earth. To support life, a planet would have to be big enough to retain an atmosphere at its distance from its star, but small enough to let most of its hydrogen escape so that it does not use up all the oxygen by combining with it to form water. According to Dr. Su-Huang of Northwestern University, the planet's radius would have to be between 1,000 and 20,000 kilometres.

One way of detecting such planets outside our own solar system would be to study a star's orbit round the galaxy. Normally, this follows an undeviating line. But if it had a big enough planet this would exert gravitational pull on the star, causing it to wobble. By measuring the wobble, astronomers could calculate the size of the planet and whether it might support life.

Eventually, the Americans hope to construct a giant radio-telescope called Cyclops which would have more than 1,500 antennae, each 100 metres in diameter, and would "cover" 65 square kilometres of land, It would cost $20 billion. The Soviet Union has its own program using satellites as well as ground stations.

How do we communicate with the extra-terrestrials if we find them? Scientists assume that any advanced civilization capable of reading our signals would understand mathematics. Early in the last century, Gauss suggested digging a huge ditch in the Sahara to represent Pythagoras' theorem, filling it with kerosene and setting it alight.

A Dutch scientist has invented a language he calls Lingua Cosmica, or Libcos, based on a mathematical code. Another system uses binary mathematics (the integers zero and one) which the extra-terrestrials would be expected to translate into dark and light squares on a grid. This would depict the shapes of a bifurcated creature (man), a sketch of our solar system, schematic drawings of the carbon and oxygen atoms, and so on.

Since we have only recently acquired the ability to communicate in space, scientists argue that any species we contact will be far in advance of our own. "We must be the most ignorant species in the universe able to communicate," says Professor Carl Sagan of Cornell University. "Any civilization just a bit less advanced than ours cannot communicate at all. So we shall be talking to a far higher civilization."

Although earth has been announcing the existence of its intelligent life by radio signals for about half a century, only extremely sensitive receivers could detect them, so our civilization may well be unknown.

In 1966, a German magazine published an article entitled "Is Life Possible on the Surface of the Earth?" assuming the question was asked by an astronomer as close as Jupiter. The lights of London, Paris and New York would just be visible from Mars. The only man-made phenomena detectable from further out in space would be nuclear explosions, of which there have been relatively few and which are over so quickly that they may be missed. Seasonal color changes could be explained without reference to organic life.

Scientists defend plan to spend $14 million on search for life in universe

The wave-front of our earliest radio emissions is still only 50 light-years distant. As Sagan gloomily remarks: "The characteristic signs of earth which may be detectable over interstellar distances include the baleful content of many American TV programs and the mindless outpourings of rock-and-roll stations."

The first intentional hello was transmitted on November 16, 1974 from the Arecibo Observatory in Puerto Rico, aimed at a group of 300,000 stars in the great cluster of Hercules, 24,000 light-years away from us. There is a 50-50 chance of civilization existing there.

Since then, space probes have carried messages. Pioneer 10 to Jupiter and Pioneer 11 to Saturn, both of which will eventually leave the solar system, contained six-by-nine-inch pictorial plaques describing their point of origin in the universe and the basic characteristics of their senders. They will not reach the vicinity of the nearest star for 80,000 years.

Scientists say the best chance of the plaques being read is if a spacecraft from a civilization travelling in interstellar space intercepts them. As Sagan says: "Placing a message aboard Pioneer 10 was very much like a ship-wrecked sailor casting a bottled message into the ocean — but the ocean of space is much vaster."

Some cultural features of our own civilization may be hard to communicate even to the most perceptive extra-terrestrials. An irate reader of the Los Angeles Times wrote in to complain about the representation of a naked man and woman on the Pioneer 10 plaque, grumbing that "our own space agency officials have found it necessary to spread this filth even beyond our own solar system."

The two Voyager spacecraft launched last autumn carried two-hour records on copper discs (with needle and instructions) of selections of Mozart and Louis Armstrong and messages from President Carter and UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim. But a picture of naked human beings designed to demonstrate our reproductive system was banned by NASA. The extra-terrestrials will just have to guess.

What will they be like? Scientists enjoy guessing as much as science-fiction authors. Some guesses sound like commericals for God's highly successful blueprint. "We may expect," says Frederick Ordway, "that their central nervous system will be rather close to the main sensory organs and the brain . . .

"A high position such as a head seems logical to provide the being with good vision and an excellent location from which to communicate with fellow-beings . . . they must be mobile and have limbs on which they can manoeuvre about — perhaps two legs or perhaps four . . . They will have appendages, permitting them to manipulate things. We call ours hands and have two — other beings may have more, probably in even numbers. For symmetry and balance, an odd number is unlikely."

Fishlike or birdlike creatures are thought unlikely because marine life is less likely to have developed manipulative skills (and thus the capability to communicate in space) and airborne creatures consume so much energy in flying that they would require vast quantities of food. But an octopus might develop the necessary skills.

Ronald Bracewell plumps for lizards on planets with higher gravity than earth's. "Such creatures may have found their antecedents in swamps, where gravity could be counteracted by buoyancy and then, instead of taking to the plains and becoming upright walkers, as our ancestors did, they might have moved out from their place of genesis along waterways, natural and artificial." He goes further, envisaging a species of "intelligent scum," which could exist in colonies with close cooperation and specialization.

What are the risks of attracting the attention of a hostile species? Michael Michaud of the U.S. State Department (which thinks of everything) says: "Given the probability that we will be dealing with a more advanced civilization, our posture should be one of calm confidence, so that we appear neither offensive nor defensive."

Philip Morrison, a physicist at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, questions whether any civilization with a superior technology would wish to harm a newcomer to inter-species communication. If through a microscope, he said, he saw a group of bacteria spill out, like a college band, "Please do not put iodine on this plate — we want to talk to you", his first inclination would certainly not be to rush the bacteria into a sterilizer.

In any case, if we get a dusty answer to that first message from Arecibo, it won't arrive for another 48,000 years. Since converational exchanges over such hyge distances will be rather slow, what do we hope to gain from SETI?

Sagan replies: "It may be that technological civilizations destroy themselves within a few decades of acquiring the capacity to do so. If so, then we may be the only one in existence at the present time, talking to ourselves. If not, the hopeful message is that it is not inevitable that a technological civilization destroys itself.

"If the results eventually prove to be negative, have we failed? Have we wasted money? No. Either it means that there are indeed extra-terrestrial beings and they are making extreme efforts not to be heard, which would be very interesting considering how relatively easy and cheap it is to communicate in space. Or else there are no other civilizations, in which case we will know that we are in a situation of extreme fragility in the universe. I believe there is no project more glorifying to human experience than to search out intelligent life elsewhere."

The Cynics of Democracy

By ANDREW KNIGHT

(Knight is editor of The Economist. He wrote this for the New York Times.)

LONDON — It is a bad thing to live in any place where a single political group monopolizes power. No, I am not thinking of the worst examples — Russia or China or some black African dictatorships, all of which are horrible to live in (many people conveniently forget) beyond anything to be described in this article.

I am thinking of some of our own "Western" democracies where democracy itself will be in peril unless ways can be found of "throwing the blighters out."

France provides the latest example of the danger. The French people have just — very sensibly — said a resounding no to a left-wing would-be government, a raft of whose members would have been hard-line Communists. It was a turn-up for the books which confounded all the opinion polls and all the psephologists.

As presented by the victors, the alternative — Marxism in fancy dress — was too awful for Frenchmen to contemplate. Hooray.

But the less welcome aspect of this gratifying result is that there is no change in a government in whose political complexion there has, bar death and old age, been no change for 20 years. Either France's large left wing must now exorcise Communism so as to make itself a viable alternative government; or the centre parties in the government must strike out against their Gaullist partners who are entrenched in every level of French government, civil service and business. For if not, political opposition in France, the biggest and naturally richest democratic landmass in Western Europe, will turn to violence instead.

It is no coincidence that in Sweden widespread tax lawbreaking — a conservative form of anarchy? — was the condition that led up two years ago to the defeat of a Social Democratic government which had effectively governed since the 1930s. It is no coincidence that terrorism in Italy should have reached its present peak at a time when the major parties in Italy's Parliament are in cahoots, instead of in healthy opposition, over most aspects of Italy's crumbled economy. And it is no coincidence that the "extra-parliamentary opposition" in West Germany, which provided the seedbed out of which the Baader-Meinhof gang of terrorists grew, was itself a response to the grand coalition government — combining government and opposition — which ruled Germany in the late 1960s.

The essence of democracy is that majorities should rule, but that opponents should enjoy the right to oppose. The essence of democracy is that majorities should rule, but that opponents should enjoy the right to oppose. The essence of any opposition is that it should provide a plausible alternative government. If the main opposition party becomes so implausible, or so feared, that it never gets to govern, then democracy is on stony ground.

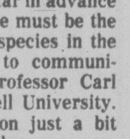
Take Italy. An almost Bourbon civil service grew up over a quarter-century after the war under the ruling Christian Democratic party. Increasingly bureaucratic, increasingly ineffective, increasingly both the creature and the maker of the ruling party, increasingly corrupt at most levels and in every imaginable sense, this Christian Democrat bureaucracy has dissipated much of Italy's postwar economic miracle. The other dissipaters have been the equal monopolies of political power in the Communist governments at state and local level, warping every bit of political employment and commercial patronage they can lay their hands on.

The snag in Italy is that the chief opposition party has, largely because it is Communist, also been too awful for voters to contemplate at national level: So, despite mismanagement, the Christian Democrats, as less awful alternatives, have continued to misrule. However much Italy's Communists have tried to make themselves respectable, the last week of polling in national elections has always seen the vital percentages swing away from them. So also in Japan a very proper fear of Communism in government has likewise led to inflexible one-party rule which is beginning to do this bastion of Asian postwar democracy no good at all.

All of us who have had the misfortune to live in entrenched one-party-dominated boroughs or counties know the harm they do. Ask any Briton who has had to live in the immemorially Labor-dominated boroughs of Glasgow or of Camden in London: Bureaucrats beget both themselves and their own tyrannies in such places simply because they share the beliefs and get the measure of politicians who will never, ever, be thrown out. Such unchanging politics breed not just bad governors and arrogant, lazy, sometimes venal, bureaucrats; they also breed cynicism among the permanent minority about the virtues of democracy as such.

The West may afford a little measure of political cynicism at Labor town-hall level. It cannot afford it, in times of terrorism and many unemployed young, in some of its key conservative sovereign states.

The Gusts of Mortality



russell baker

At the age of 73, Senator James O. Eastland called it quits the other day and will not stand for re-election. The famous white supremacist had become physically "droopy," a friend said. "When Jim woke up Tuesday morning and his blood pressure was 220 over 110, his mind was made up."

At the age of 73, Karl Wallenda was neither droopy nor ready to retire. But while walking a wire strung between two hotels in Puerto Rico, he was betrayed by a gust of wind, fell 100 feet and died.

That same night the Beatles generation — not yet 73, but looking down the gun barrel at 40, which used to seem like 173 during the fevered 1960's — was done in by a 90-minute television satire about a group called "The Rutles." A cold-blooded assault on the hype and dumbness of the 1960's as illustrated in the Beatles phenomenon, the show must have depressed every aging child of the Woodstock Generation with the icy intimations of mortality commonly produced by discovery that the glories of one's youth are not only suddenly very remote but were also mostly just asininities.

Those awful claims of mortality — live long enough and they assert themselves with the droop. Keep the droop out of the blood stream, step into the sunshine feeling cocky and they come in a gust of wind. Turn on the television and they arrive sandwiched between commercials for the promise of eternal consumption.

Henry Kissinger's official State Department portrait, like all official portraits, is an official attempt to overcome mortality. These icons line the more sanctified official walls all over Washington long after the subject's departure from both temporal power and life. The Kissinger portrait has been rejected.

Officially — struggle against mortality is officially conducted and officially financed in Washington — the State Department said last week that the picture was "beautifully painted" but failed to capture Kissinger's "dynamism" and "radiance." One assumes it was Kissinger himself who found the portrait wanting since bureaucracies don't usually indulge in delicate artistic judgments without consulting their political advisers.

Whether it was Kissinger, however, who complained of inadequate dynamism and radiance, or whether this criticism was propounded by the State Department we cannot know. Nor does it matter much. What is more interesting than the portrait is the picture of Kissinger fretting about what sort of figure he will cut beyond mortality.

A new painting will be executed, presumably before he is affected by droop. One senses the former airborne statesman, despite his celebrated wit and joie de vivre, becoming more aware of how whimsical those gusts of wind can be.

And who can blame him? He reads the papers like the rest of us. He knows that everything passes: white supremacy, Woodstock generations, the sense of smell . . .

Yes, the sense of smell is going too. Someone sent a newspaper clipping reporting that medical research, dear, depressing old medical research, has found that many people have already lost their sense of smell almost completely. No one quite knows why. A deterioration seems to be under way.

It does indeed. It is called creeping mortality, though why "creeping" I cannot say, since it always seems to be leaping out of the newspapers and rubbing its hands with satisfaction. If I were Henry Kissinger I'd want the State Department to get my picture done by the old masters, too, and soon. The wind is gusting suspiciously. The sense of smell is going and more and more college students are designing their own atomic bombs.

A 22-year-old with one year of college physics has designed a series of nuclear weapons that two government bomb makers say are "highly credible." News like that gives a person a very satisfactory sense of mortality, particularly in view of the way students in Europe lately have been showing a disposition to use any weapon they can get their hands on in order to improve the human condition.

It doesn't do to think about these things, of course. That's why the paper prints them on a back page, along with "Man Killed As Two Bombs Are Exploded in Denver" and "Suicide Rate Is Highest in Northern New England." The paper knows if we start thinking about them we'll never make it to 73, or, if we do, when we get there we won't have what it takes to go out on the high wire.

It must be great to walk the high wire at 73. It must beat worrying about your portrait in middle age.

'Canada Envy Of the World'

Canada is the envy of the world because it has two major construction projects in the works, the James Bay power project and the Foothills pipeline, Purchasing Management Association of Canada president Dan Creighton said in Victoria Wednesday.

"There is no reason for the continuing pessimism in this country. The money will be flowing into Canada. All we need is a little more confidence and we will be out of the recession," he said in an interview.

Creighton, director of purchasing and logistics for General Motors of Canada (diesel division), said all signs point to a full recovery for this country by 1980.

"I am dismayed by the pessimism I find as I travel across Canada. We have two of the biggest projects in the world both taking place in Canada. The economic spinoffs from the pipeline will be tremendous."

He said Canadians are only beginning to realize the economic benefits the two major construction projects will bring. There will be more jobs and more opportuntity for sales of many types of products.

Canadians have every reason to be optimistic about the immediate future, despite the fall of the dollar.

The shrinking dollar makes imports more expensive but also creates opportunities for exports, Creighton said.

He said the Canadian economy would thrive with the dollar stablized around 90 cents U.S.

"But it should float, not be pegged. I don't like government interference in these things."

Creighton was in Victoria to address the local branch of the Purchasing Management Association of Canada Wednesday night at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel.

Grain Terminal Pushed

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Difficulties in forming a consortium of grain handling companies based in Alberta is blocking construction of a giant export terminal near Prince Rupert, says Alberta Agriculture Minister Hugh Horner.

In a telephone interview Tuesday, Horner said he is trying to get Alberta Wheat Pool, United Grain Growers' and Cargill Grain Co. officials together [illegible] construction of the terminal.

The Alberta government is willing to "be the bank if you like," said Horner.

The federal government last month announced plans to spend $2.8 million to upgrade the Prince Rupert grain terminal and harbor and to prepare construction sites for more commodity bulk-loading facilities on Ridley Island, near Prince Rupert.

Horner said he is meeting with the grain companies to get a common proposal to construct the terminal. Once the proposal is presented to the governmentt, Horner will seek funding through the cabinet.

BEER BOTTLE RETURN ENDS

The provincial liquor distribution branch is planning no longer to accept beer bottle returns, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said Wednesday.

Mair said in an interview the branch is negotiating with provincial breweries to set up a system in which consumers could return beer bottles to the breweries instead of to government liquor stores.

"The government wants to get out of the business of taking back beer bottles," the minister said. "I think everybody agrees that the present system is unsatisfactory."

He said that liquor outlets are unsuitable as a return depots because of space limitations, a factor which has limited returns of cases to just two a day for each customer.

Arson Likely In Two Fires

Victoria fire inspectors suspect arson in two recent fires.

Deputy chief Mike Belton said it appears oil from a tank at the rear of Q—Lectronic Services, 1543 Fort, was drained off and ignited with refuse in a commercial pickup bin. There was little damage.

Around midnight firemen found a motorcycle at 217 Government engulfed in flames. Belton said there was no apparent reason for the fire, which destroyed the bike.

There have been similar fires involving both cars and motorbikes during the past three months in both Victoria and Saanich.

The latest fires occurred Tuesday night.

10 Years of Trudeau:

HAS THERE BEEN MORE PROMISE THAN PERFORMANCE?

OTTAWA (CP) — Ten years ago, in the age-of-Aquarius afterglow of his Liberal leadership and federal election victories, Pierre Trudeau predicted that his biggest challenge would be living up to the expectations that carried him to power.

"The trick," he told author and aide Merle Shain, one of hundreds of new-politics disciples who had helped make him the country's 15th prime minister, "will be to do enough fast enough, before people like you are disappointed."

Now, as Trudeau ends his first decade in power, his critics say there was more promise than performance during his first 10 years.

The political climate of 1978 undoubtedly bears little resemblance to that a decade ago.

For Canadians then, the implied promises of the socially-benevolent "Just Society" from a 48-year-old swinging intellectual had not yet been soured by so-called economic stagflation — combined inflation, unemployment and slow growth — and warnings from a pragmatic 58-year-old prime minister that Canadians were living beyond their means.

For Canadians then, Trudeau was a trendy bachelor, globetrotter and bicultural Montrealer who could solve the dilemma of French Quebec's place in Canada, not the terse, separated husband and father of three who would preside over federal politics while Quebecers elected their first separatist government.

In some political and personal ways, Trudeau's second decade in power opens very much like his first.

He's gearing up for a general election. Quebec's place in Canada is a leading issue. Liberal party fortunes hinge on his personal popularity.

In other ways, his second decade begins far differently, shaped by a world that has moved from optimism to pessimism, from economic prosperity and cheap energy to financial doubt and expensive fuel.

Trudeau came to power as a swinging, sandal-wearing bachelor, propelled by an impressive, televised performance as a constitutional negotiator at a February, 1968, federal-provincial conference.

There, as justice minister, he locked horns with Quebec premier Daniel Johnson over special status for Quebec and a constitutional bill of rights.

His apprenticeship in federal politics had been brief — he was first elected in his Montreal riding of Mont Royal Nov. 8, 1965 — but blessed. Lester Pearson made him his personal parliamentary secretary in early 1966, and a year later on April 4, justice minister.

He made his name as justice minister, not only for his finesse as a constitutional negotiator, but for two politically-adventuresome bills — one that extended grounds for divorce beyond adultery to such causes as cruelty, perversion and "marriage breakdown," a second that ended Criminal Code prohibitions against homosexuality and unnatural sexual acts between consenting adults, therapeutic abortions in hospitals, and lotteries organized by charities and government.

After a January holiday in Tahiti — where, at 48 and registered at a vacation club as Pierre Mercier, he met 19-year-old Margaret Sinclair of Vancouver, later his wife — he moved steadily toward the leadership.

He toured provincial capitals to prepare the ground for the February federal-provincial conference. That meeting and a triumphant appearance at a Feb. 9, 1968, Ontario Liberal association convention set the stage for his April 6 victory.

His candidacy, he said, began in the subconscious mind of the press, "like a huge practical joke on the liberal party — I mean that."

"What happened, I think, is that the joke blew up in your face and in mine."

In the beginning, Trudeau's years in office, like his personal life, held promise of an exciting political adventure. "Just Society" policies on tax and law reform, defence, foreign affairs, regional development and guaranteed annual incomes were launched by a reorganized cabinet and a prime ministerial office that expanded from a haphazard 40-member mix-up under Lester Pearson to an 86-member machine under Trudeau.

But just as his March 4, 1971, marriage to Margaret would wither six years and three children later, so too would Trudeau's early policies of hope.

During his first term, Trudeau moved internationally to establish diplomatic relations with the People's Republic of China and the Vatican, to cut by half the country's NATO forces in Europe, to freshen relations with the Soviet Union and to build so-called Third Option world links that would reduce Canadian dependence on the United States.

By the end of his first decade, the foreign policy and defence review that led to the third option and NATO cuts had given way to massive billion-dollar spending on fighter planes and tanks for Europe, patrol planes and ships at home.

At home, Trudeau's years began with new departments to fight regional disparities and to involve the federal government in the emerging social issues of environment, consumer affairs, communications and urban affairs.

The innovative Opportunities for Youth (OFY) and Local Initiative Program (LIP) were established to foster community self-help efforts.

The Official Languages Act, giving all the right to deal with government and its agencies in French or English, was passed.

Unemployment insurance was broadened, pensions were raised and allowed to increase to keep pace with inflation. Commons rules were changed, and Trudeau's earlier proposals on divorce and homosexual and other rights became law.

Ten years later, Trudeau planted rumors with New Brunswick Premier Richard Hatfield that the department of regional economic expansion might have to be scrapped to satisfy demands for government cost-cutting.

Both OFY and LIP had already been sacrificed for similar reasons.

The government retrenched on official bilingualism, reducing the number of federal public servants told to learn both languages, in an effort to still a backlash in English Canada.

Unemployment insurance was tightened, and the government launched a campaign to catch cheaters. Pension indexing was under scrutiny as potentially bank-breaking.

Commons business, despite 1969 reforms and two majority Parliaments, proceeded at a pace similar to that in the minority Pearson and Diefenbaker years — a bill was passed, on average, once every three sitting days.

Early Trudeau promises of Senate reform have yet to come into effect, and appointments during the decade followed a time-honored tradition. Friends of Trudeau and the Liberal party — Jean Marchand and former party fundraiser Louis Giguere, for example — have claimed all but a portion of various vacancies.

Throughout, Trudeau's forte has been language and constitutional reform, but in this area too his efforts have been largely frustrated. For a time, in 1971, it appeared that he might succeed in breaking a 50-year-impasse over the question of claiming the country's underlying law — the British North America Act — from Britain with a formula for changing it at home.

In a sense, his efforts in nearly all fields have been stymied by difficulties with the economy.

Though listed in his official biography as an economist, Trudeau associates say the prime minister — particularly during his early years in power — paid little attention to the subject.

Trudeau's problems in the field are reflected in various statements he's made over the years, as inflation and unemployment see-sawed in severity, eventually joining in a phenomenon known as stagflation where both climbed together.

The record indicates that inflation has been Trudeau's prime concern, and he's tried to meet it with a series of commissions, labor-business-government agreements and, finally, formal wage and price controls — the mechanism he attacked as a "snake-oil" solution to defeat Robert Stanfield in the 1974 election.

Trudeau's most devastating impact on the economy, however, came not through action as much as words.

In a December, 1975, television interview, he said the free market had not been working, and that government "is going to take a larger role in running institutions."

Two years later, he conceded ruefully in a similar interview that the statement had caused corporate leaders, the nation over to "fall off their chairs." Free enterprise became his watchword.

In many ways, the Trudeau of 1978, a year away from his 60th birthday, is back where he started. The fight for the Canada that brought him to federal politics is more clearly defined, but the issue remains the same — Can French-Canadian Quebec blossom best in Canada or alone?

Flower in mouth, Pierre Trudeau awaits the vote that made him leader of the federal liberal party and prime minister, 10 years ago today.

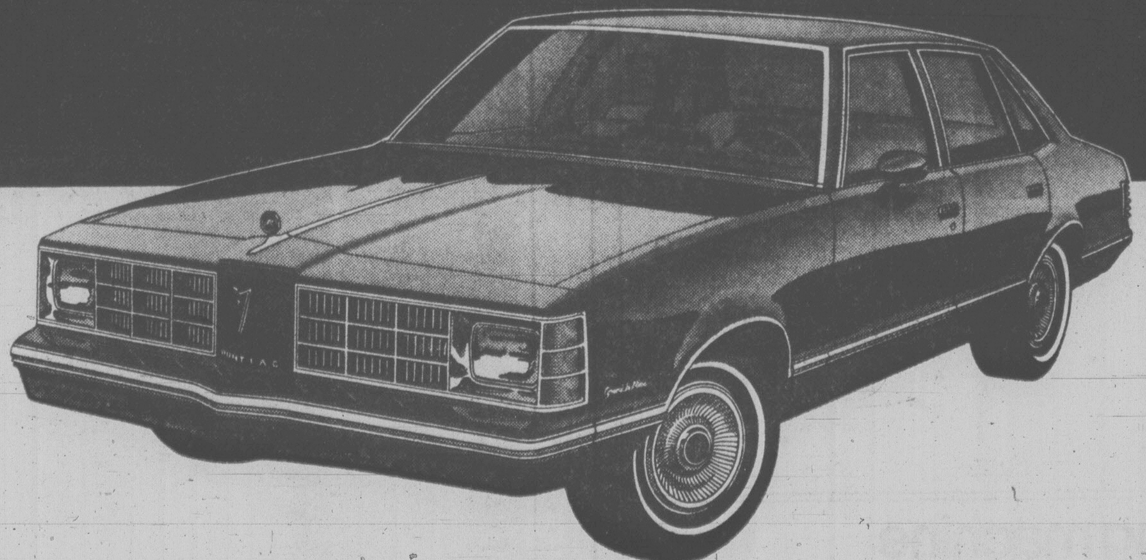
Nobody's got it like Pontiac's got it!



Grand LeMans 4-door Sedan.

True mid-size
The exclusive inside story

For 1978 General Motors has delivered a dazzling performance in redefining the mid-size car.

RESULT: the new mid-size that doesn't short-change you on the inside.

PONTIAC'S GOT IT: the new LeMans Series.

HOW DOES PONTIAC PULL IT OFF? With scientific design, cunning craftsmanship, and a lot of style. The new re-sized LeMans Series.

They're trimmer on the outside than last year. Now you'd expect a corresponding compactness on the inside. But no. Inside, the new LeMans not only retains the space you're used to, it actually features more room for heads and legs. Instead of a "squeeze-play" you get comfortable seating for six passengers. And even a bigger trunk.

And to top it all off, there's the traditional LeMans styling, attention to detail and comfort, and handsome interior appointments. Not only is that Pontiac finesse prominent in the new LeMans Series, it may well have never been so finely interpreted before.

This good news goes for the whole LeMans family: Coupes, Sedans, and Safari Wagons. LeMans and Grand LeMans, with V6 power standard and a V8 option, and Grand Am, V8 power only. It's all part of the exclusive inside story. They've all got it. And nobody's got it like Pontiac.

Buying or leasing, see your Pontiac dealer for new excitement.

Controls Off $400 Suites

All apartments renting for more than $400 a month have been removed from rent controls as of April 1, Consumer Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said Wednesday night.

Speaking to the Greater Vancouver Apartment Owners Association, Mair said he hopes another step in removing rent controls would follow soon.

He told landlords that the success of the program would depend on them and there will be an appeal open to tenants who have been subjected to excessive rent increases.

"I am asking all of you who are affected to respond in a responsible manner because we are, in effect, testing the water," the minister said.

Mair said vacancies are increasing and in some cases landlords are offering incentives but there is still a shortage of low-to-middle-priced rental units in most areas.

"Many of the tenants in these units could experience substantial hardship if rental controls were immediately and completely removed."

Mair said controls will be phased out mainly according to price but geographical areas will also be considered.

All landlords will have to file notices of rent increases whether or not they are under controls.

Tenants who feel they are facing an excessive rent increase may appeal by way of fixed-choice arbitration.

Under this procedure, the tenant must file an appeal with the Rent Review Commission within 30 days of the increase and suggest an alternative rent with supporting reasons.

The commission will rule in favor of either the landlords or the tenants and will not consider a third option.

Davis's Firing Tops Agenda

This consists of contacting a travel agency, finding out what flights are available each way, offering the minister his choice then making the reservation, the spokesman said. The tickets are then billed to the ministry.

Gardom said he had received a copy of a statement made by Davis, and had asked Vogel for a report.

Bennett, in firing Davis, said he was advised during the weekend of an investigation affecting the minister.

Bennett said the investigation into Davis was not started by the B.C. government, adding he does not know which government agency or police force had initiated the investigation.

"I was only advised that an investigation was taking place," Bennett said in the legislature.

"I must tell you it wasn't initiated by myself as premier or by the government."

Outside the house, Bennett refused to give assurances that details of the investigation would be made public even if Davis is cleared of all wrongdoing.

As a result of being fired, Davis will lose the $24,000 a year he was paid as a cabinet member. He will continue to receive $24,000-a-year salary as the MLA from North Vancouver-Seymour.

Bennett took as notice, on behalf of Gardom, a question by Conservative leader Vic Stephens who sought assurance that no senior members in that department are under suspicion.

Meanwhile, a spokesman in the former minister's office denied that Davis' personal secretary and other staff were unable to gain access Wednesday to his office after security staff changed the locks.

Public Works Minister Alex Fraser said the locks change was normal policy whenever a minister leaves the cabinet.

The spokesman said the staff did have a key and let themselves in.

Budget Down Monday

near, as MPs shouted and cheered the questioners and cabinet members.

At one point Trudeau told the Commons he is "ready for an election at any time" when the opposition pressed him about the likelihood of a full six-day budget debate.

The budget comes at a time when currency traders say there is a full-scale run on the Canadian dollar, which now is worth less than 88 cents U.S. Even the Canadian banks now are speculating against the national currency, Toronto traders say.

With wage and price controls starting to come off at mid-month, the inflation rate has rebounded to 8.7 per cent. More than a million Canadians, 8.3 per cent of the work force, were jobless in February.

New figures for unemployment are to be released Tuesday — the morning after the budget statement — and March inflation figures will be published Wednesday.

Chretien Wednesday took the brunt of Progressive Conservative attacks on the value of the dollar.

A few hours before the dollar closed on money markets at 87.87 cents U.S., Chretien told John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert) in the Commons the government has no plans to impose foreign exchange controls although some Canadian investors may be moving their money outside the country.

By noon today, the dollar's value had risen a fraction, to 87.90 cents U.S.

"They (Social Credit government members) have been bought, and those that are bought are sold as well," said Cocke.

"They are totally immoral."

In the Alberta legislature, Horner said it is not government policy to have Crown corporations involved in the political affairs of another province.

He said he had not discussed the matter with PWA vice-president Dave Jacox, whom Notley said had approved the free service. Horner said he does not have discussions with PWA management.

Donald Watson, then PWA president and now president of Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd., said in Vancouver that any party which asked probably would have received a political contribution in the form of free transport.

"Our policy in those days when we were in the private sector was we never had any money to give so we would give some free transportation," said Watson.

He said decisions on dispensing free travel would have been made at middle management levels and that he couldn't recall making any change in that policy after the Alberta government took control of the airline.

Out Goes Headmistress And In Comes Principal

Some Changes Definitely Coming Up For Girls At Norfolk

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

One of the first things Christine Lurie plans to do when she becomes headmistress of Norfolk House in July is change her title to principal.

The term headmistress, traditionally associated with English-style private girls' schools, is sexist and outdated, says Lurie.

It's even possible the head of the 65-year-old school will be a man some day. Half the 34 applicants for the job were men, Lurie says.

Although she praises Norfolk House as a fine traditional school, she shows little reverence for custom.

There are definitely changes to be made, she says.

"I don't plan on going in like a bull in a china shop, but there's no way I can be like Miss Scott."

Winifred Scott is retiring after 21 years as headmistress at Norfolk. When she started, there were 87 pupils, now the school has an enrolment of 270 girls in grades one through 12.

Parents pay between $1,200 (the grade one tuition) and $1,900.

The parents come from all income levels and some must make sacrifices to send their daughters to Norfolk House.

"They do it because they know their children will get a top-notch education," Lurie says.

The yearly fee includes a good drama and sports program, emphasis on fine arts and a process defined as character building.

Lurie, like her predecessor, believes strongly in achieving academic excellence. But she thinks the schools academic impact can be stronger, particularly in the disciplines of math and science.

A wide range of experiences should be offered to the girls; they should be encouraged to discover their full potential and develop it into satisfying lifelong careers.

"When I was going to school, a girl had two choices, she could be a nurse or a teacher," Lurie said."A job was just something to do during the interval between school and marriage."

But Lurie is prepared to work hard to help change that. She is determined the graduates of Norfolk House will be equipped to go out into the world and master anything they set their minds on.

"I want them to know they don't have to settle for low-level jobs with low-level pay," says Lurie, who says she is not a feminist, but will fight to see women get a fair deal in the work force.

An energetic 37 year-old, Lurie is a wife and mother who has always worked as a teacher or counsellor and managed to run a home at the same time. At 30, she went back to university to complete her master's degree.

Born and raised in England, Lurie graduated from a state grammar school and went to teacher training college. At 20, she was teaching school in the slums of Manchester and Leeds.

Without a university education she was barred from teaching in high class grammar schools, so she went back to school.

She attained a bachelor of education and a masters degree after moving to Canada and worked as a high school counsellor in Calgary before moving to Oak Bay two years ago with her family.

"My friends say I chew work and spit it out."

"Miss Scott was an autocrat. She ruled with an iron rod and refused to delegate responsibility. I can't do that."

The declining enrolment problem plaguing the public school system is a perfect opportunity to attract the cream of the B.C. teaching crop to Norfolk, she believes.

Independent schools in B.C have not been affected by the declining enrolment problem. Total enrolment has been maintained at about 22,500 for the last decade.

In Greater Victoria alone there are 16 independently operated schools with a population this year of about 3,200 students.

Norfolk House is one of four Victoria schools run on the traditional English-style headmaster-headmistress system.

Although salaries are not as high as in the public school system, good teachers are drawn by the school's reputation; academic freedom, small classes of about 17 students and the prospect of teaching bright girls with few distractions.

Uniforms eliminate one element of competition, the fact there are no boys in the class dispenses with another.

"The girls can devote all their energies to learning and can assert themselves as individuals and not by sex."

B.C. Eases Policy On Unwed Mothers

A provincial hospitals policy that discriminated against unmarried pregnant women has now been corrected, says Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber.

He said Health Minister Bob McClelland has agreed to rescind the policy, which for years required unmarried pregnant women newly-arrived in B.C. to wait an additional three months before becoming eligible for hospital benefits.

Barber said he pointed out the discrepancy to health officials last September and in subsequent letters, noted the policy is not followed anywhere else in Canada.

He said the practice in B.C. contradicted a 1972 federal-provincial agreement in which all provinces and the two territories agreed to provide hospital and medical benefits under the same terms and conditions to persons who take up permanent residence in another province or territory.

In a letter to Associate Deputy Health Minister John Glenwright, Barber charged the province discriminated against an unmarried pregnant woman because the regulations required she had to be a permanent resident in B.C. for six months before getting benefits.

There is only a three-month waiting period for everyone else.

In addition, he said, she had to prove she was still in the province three months after the birth of the baby, a requirement which applied to no other new permanent resident receiving hospital benefits.

Glenwright replied the unmarried mother's policy was established years ago because the majority of these women returned to their home provinces shortly after discharge from hospital.

He argued the province shouldn't have to pick up the tab for persons who have no intention of remaining here and denied any discrimination.

There was a further exchange of letters, and finally Barber wrote directly to McClelland.

The minister replied on March 21 saying he agreed with Barber that the policy is discriminatory and advised it would be rescinded.

Home Building Coming Back

Victoria housing starts are down 24 per cent this year but there are signs of a construction recovery on single family homes.

Figures released by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation today show there were 621 starts during the first three months in the Greater Victoria area, down 24 per cent from 817 in the same period one year ago.

The collapse is in apartment units with only 344 launched this year, down from 639. There were only six in March, down from 119 the previous March.

But there were 74 single family homes started during the month, up from 42 in February and well above the 35 started the previous March.

The activity reflects a reduction in the amount of surplus houses in the area. At the end of March there were 199 unsold new houses in the region, down from 240 at the same time in 1977.

There have been 165 single family homes started this year, up from 133. All of this increase occurred in March.

There have been 102 duplex units started during the first three months, up from 32 and 10 row housing units, down from 13.

The surplus new houses are mainly in Saanich where there are 78 on the market but this is down from 165 at the same time last year. There are 27 new unsold houses in Esquimalt, up from 16.

The condominum surplus has declined but this is a result of conversions to rental properties rather than by way of sales.

There are only 148 new unsold condos on the market, down form 276. But meanwhile the number of vacant rental properties has jumped to 426 from 387.

PROFESSIONAL

A four-day crafts fair which started at the University of Victoria today isn't student oriented, a spokesman said today.

Gwen Whittaker, of the Handweavers and Spinners Guild, said the UVic event will feature work by professional crafts people and not student projects as stated in Wednesday's Max Low column.

Frisbee Play Serious Ploy For Jobless

Some of Victoria's unemployed will be playing frisbee Friday on the lawn in front of the Legislative Buildings.

They're doing it not to show that the jobless have more fun but to let people know they are there, that they are unemployed and that their ranks are swelling every day.

The frisbee game is the first project of the Victoria Committee of The Unemployed, born at a meeting Wednesday attended by 11 people.

The games begin at 12:15 p.m. and the committee members will also distribute their first newsletter.

During Wednesday's meeting, the 10 men and one woman revealed some of the frustrations, bitterness and desperation that goes with being jobless and laid out general guidelines for action.

They included:

— an instruction program to teach people the basics of survival in the world of the unemployed — how to take advantage of various forms of assistance and what resources are available in the community;

— a political action group to lobby politicians at the municipal and provincial levels and generally keep the problem in the public eye;

— distributing a newsletter;

— holding "rap" groups and possibly counselling sessions for those who want to unburden themselves;

— setting up their own employment agency;

— discussion with the business community to see if any job-creating measures can be taken;

— contact with unemployed groups across Canada and possible formation of a national body.

John Luton, a 23-year-old unemployed University of Victoria graduate who organized the meeting, had hoped for a bigger turnout,

However, those at the meeting felt that a healthy nucleus had been formed and the committee would no doubt grow from that.

Luton opened the meeting by talking about the frustration and inadequacy that the unemployed feel and the need for some organization to help them cope.

He also said unemployment is now becoming a big issue.

"It is going to be up to the unemployed to make sure it is a daily issue."

A retired official of the department of education said the biggest problem faced by the unemployed is that they are invisible.

Society doesn't know about them thanks to welfare and unemployment insurance cheques sent through the mail.

"Maybe we should wear a uniform to make sure they know who we are," he said.

However, that prompted an unemployed professional man to say he feels useless now and wouldn't want to advertise his plight.

Another who had worked in a variety of fields stepped in and said it was time to change that attitude.

"There is nothing wrong with you," he said. "You aren't useless."

"It is the system . . . that made you think that you are useless."

Another professional man who has a temporary job now, said he was shocked last April when he found himself out of work for the first time in his life. He remained unemployed for six months and said it was a learning experience to find out that despite all his skills sometimes he didn't even get an interview for a job that was available.

He said for most jobs there are never fewer than 80 applicants.

For that reason, he added, the existing system of job hunting doesn't have much relevance.

"To go out and sell yourself is a great idea as long as 200 other people aren't doing the same thing."

One man said he always detested organizations but felt now was the time "to get my head together with other people."

The one woman in attendance has been unemployed for three years despite taking a refresher course at Camosun College in 1975. She needs a job because of a disturbing family situation. "Mentally I can't take it any more."

The committee's next meeting will take place at 2 p.m. April 19 in the Rayment Room of the Union Centre, 2750 Quadra.

Big Wave Injures Seaman

The unidentified crew member was taken off the Diana Isle by the destroyer escort HMCS Mackenzie and taken to Esperanza Inlet for transfer to a B.C. Emergency Health Services aircraft.

The man is reported to have suffered a chest injury.

The vessel sent out a call for assistance.

The rescue co-ordination centre said two other members of the crew were not hurt and that the fishing vessel was capable of making its own way.

AirWest Workers Still Out

Striking AirWest Airlines Ltd. employees are still off the job today as union and company negotiators continue to discuss back-to-work arrangements.

Company president Norm Gold had said earlier in the week that the 90 pilots, mechanics and clerical workers would be back on the job today following agreement on back-to-work procedures.

However, Gold's office said today meetings are still going on and there is no indication when they might end.

The employees, members of the Teamsters Union, Local 213, went on strike Nov. 13. They have ratified a new contract by an 80-per-cent margin but the terms of the agreement have not been released.

Since the strike began, AirWest management personnel have maintained a limited service on mainland-Vancouver Island flights, except for an 18-day period when the airline was grounded because of safety regulation infractions.

The employees have been without a contract since Oct. 31, 1976.

GUEST HOUSE REJECTED

A proposed guest house in south Oak Bay was turned down today after aldermen said it would be inconsistent with the neighborhood.

Lia Robinson sought municipal approval to run a guest house at 1352-1354 St. Patrick.

Council's zoning committee was told the building is a duplex and zoned single-family and the applicant sought accommodation for seven or eight guests.

"What she wants is a spot-zone change," said committee chairman Ald. John Goult, warning it would be a fundamental change in the character of the neighborhood and if one was allowed, it would set a precedent for others.

Ask The Times

Q.Can you tell me if using the hot water in an electric water heater will make a good tea. Why is it that no two cups of tea taste the same? R.B.S.

A. No. Fresh running water should be used and boiled before pouring onto tea leaves, Making tea is an art, and a number of factors will affect the flavor. The quality of the water is one, such as well water or fresh running water from a creek. The type of teapot use is another.

Triangle Summit Purchase Expected

The provincial government has asked Parks Canada to share the cost of buying about 11 acres on the summit of Triangle Mountain near Colwood, Colwood Capital regional director Howard Drummond said today.

He said Esquimalt Socred MLA Lyle Kahl had indicated to him the property will "probably" be purchased.

About a year ago, he said, it was also suggested that the property be bought jointly by the federal government, the provincial government and the Capital Regional District.

"But the regional district hasn't got the money," he said."However, if the federal governments comes through with funds, we will have to re-evaluate the matter."

The land is owned by Americans.

Drummond said he was informed the owners wanted $750,000 for the property.

"I think the price is too steep," he said.

"There are other objections," he added."The proposed park doesn't conform in size to what a regional park should be. Its use would be limited."

Residents of Triangle Mountain have campaigned for purchase of the summit cap as parkland because of the spectacular view.

The historic branch of Parks Canada is interested in the property because it was once the site of a Second World War bunker.

Drummond said some residents feel parklands funds should be spent to acquire property which would be of greater use to a larger number of people.

He cited as examples Tod Inlet, adjacent to Butchart Gardens, land surrounding Esquimalt Lagoon or waterfront property.

"Some people also say there are just as good views from Mount Blinkhorn and Mount Metchosin," he said.

Other regional directors appear to be lukewarm to the Triangle Mountain proposal.

Saanich alderman John Mika said one of the areas which deserve high priority in the parkland acquisition program is the Sooke Potholes.

"It is heavily used by people from the whole of the Greater Victoria area." he said.

The provincial parks department would neither confirm nor deny that the summit of Triangle is being considered as a park.

However, one park official said Recreation and Conservation Mininster Sam Bawlf did inspect the property recently.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was moderately higher in active mid-afternoon trading, spurred by sharp gains in oil issues and a two-point advance at New York.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. totalled 2.79 million shares compared with 2.97 million at the same time Wednesday.

Advances outnumbered declines 215 to 144 with 233 issues unchanged.

Prado Exploration Ltd. rose four cents to 74 cents a share on the sale of 1,000 shares following its opening resumption after announcing the possible closure of a mine owned by Cornwall Tin and Mining Corp. Prado holds majority interest in Cornwall.

Among industrials, Home Oil A shot up 1½ to $42, Home Oil B 1½ to $40½, Monarch Investments ¾ to $9, Bow Valley Industries ¾ to $26⅜ and General Motors ¾ to $70¼.

Canadian General Electric dropped ¾ to $23¼, Pancana Industries one cent to $1.74, New Providence Developments 6½ cents to 42½ cents, Wall and Redekop 15 cents to $2.60 and Brascan A ⅛ to $16.

Denison Mines gained 1¼ to $65½, Rio Algom ⅝ to $30⅝ and Roman Corp. ½ to $27. Ego Mines fell two cents to $2.88 and Anglo United Development one cent to $1.18.

Ranger Oil Canada climbed 1¾ to $31⅞, Siebens Oil and Gas 1⅝ to $35 and Canadian Superior Oil 1½ to $58½. Skye Resources slipped ¼ to $9 and Amalgamated Bonanza Petroleum ¼ to $36⅝.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market carried its recent rally into a third session today, shrugging off some mid-session selling.

Gainers held a 3-to-2 advantage over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Trading was very active. NYSE volume totaled 19.06 million shares two-thirds of the way through the session.

Analysts said there wasn't any single striking news development to explain the rally.

It began on Tuesday as the dollar staged an upturn in foreign exchange. Although the dollar has since turned erratic, however, the stock market has continued to work its way ahead.

The brief pullback in stock prices at mid-day came on the heels of a gloomy assessment of the inflation outlook issued by the Council on Wage and Price Stability, which said the underlying inflation rate seemed "hopelessly stuck" in the six to seven per cent range.

But by early afternoon the market was moving ahead again.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were generally higher in moderate afternoon trading today on the Montreal Stock Exchange. Volume at 2:30 p.m. EST was 344,500 shares, compared with 358,600 shares traded up to the same time Wednesday. Imperial Oil A gained ⅛ at $19½, Velcro ¼ at $10¾, Gulf Oil Canada ½ at $28⅞, Carling O'Keefe 10 cents at $4.20, MacMillan Bloedel ⅝ at $18⅞ and Montreal Trust 1⅛ at $16½. Royal Bank lost ⅛ at $28⅝ and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce ⅛ at $27.

London

LONDON (CP) — Prices moved moderately higher near the close of light trading today on the London stock market. The Financial Times index was up 1.2 at 471.4 at the close. Leading industrial advanced, while mining issues closed below earlier highs.

PIZZA PIEMAN

We're expanding in B.C. and talking with business people who want a fast-food/restaurant opportunity

Restaurant-operators/real estate developers

Pizza Pieman started modestly with one outlet in Victoria. Plus some great food ideas. That was in 1966.

Opportunities exist for various types of operations.
One is our licensed Family Restaurant, with a varied menu, old-time movies, and the accent on fun.
Another is a self-serve sit-in outlet with take-out and home delivery service.
Various concepts can be tailored to your location and market.
Interested parties should be prepared to invest between $20,000 and $50,000.

Opportunities Exist NOW for Prime Locations On Vancouver Island and in Vancouver.

Chip Export Terminal Site

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fibreco Ltd., a forest industry marketing co-operative, reports it has bought a 23-acre North Vancouver site for a $14 million terminal for shipping of export wood chips.

Hugh Cooper, company chairman, said the site was selected over two other possible sites on Howe Sound — at Squamish and Britannia Beach — because of transportation costs.

Cooper said sawmills served by the British Columbia Railway system produce about two-thirds of the chips available for export and the BCR charges the same flat rate for delivering these chips to Squamish, Britannia Beach or North Vancouver.

The uniform rate would not apply to chips brought by rail from the south central Interior. While the charge for delivery to North Vancouver might be $28 a bone dry unit (2,400 pounds), an additional $10 would be added for movement via the BCR to Britannia or Squamish.

Cooper said this addition would represent a charge of $300 a car.

The port of Squamish had tried to secure the Fibreco terminal for its waterfront, to help offset the revenue loss resulting from the closure last year of B.C. Railway's car plant.

Cooper said that by building from scratch on the North Vancouver waterfront, Fibreco can create a high-capacity terminal capable of fully loading one of the largest chip carriers now in service in under 24 hours. It is expected to be in operation in May, 1979.

Cougars, Hawks Sharing The Psychological Crunch

He wasn't setting up any alibi, but Portland coach Ken Hodge hit on an interesting point before his Winter Hawks and Victoria Cougars squared off in Memorial Arena for a Western Canada Hockey League playoff meeting Tuesday.

"The Cougars have been playing under pressure for two weeks," said Hodge. "Until tonight, my guys haven't been under any pressure."

The question he had to ask himself, Hodge added, was: Can the Winter Hawks cope with it?

They didn't. The Cougars won an important 4-3 overtime decision.

Until recent days, the Hawks haven't had an opportunity to play under pressure. They cruised, rather comfortably, to a first-place finish in the Western Division whereas the Cougars, battling New Westminster Bruins and Seattle Breakers for the final two playoff positions, survived great pressure in the stretch run.

The Cardiac Cougars, losing their first three playoff games, also were the first to be placed in the pressure cooker in the three-team, round-robin semi-final series. The pressure was never more obvious than in last Saturday's game in Portland, which Victoria won 6-3.

The pressure remains. . .on both the Cougars and Portland. The greatest psychological burden, however, is on Portland. Beaten 5-4 by New Westminster before 10,969 fans Wednesday in Vancouver's PNE Coliseum, Hodge's Hawks must win here tonight to survive.

A Victoria victory will wrap up a playoff berth for the Cougars.

Should Portland win, the Cougars would have to come back and win Friday night's meeting with the Bruins in Memorial Arena and Sunday's series finale in New Westminster.

Rookie Kevin Eastman, a key figure in Victoria's two victories over Portland, will start in goal tonight. In addition, the Cougars also will be bolstered by the return of defenceman Leroy Heck, who was sidelined with a hip injury last week.

The Bruins' win in Vancouver clinched a playoff berth for New Westminster. But the Bruins had to come back from a 4-1 deficit to do it.

Goals by Brian Young, Dave Orleski and Randy Irving, all coming in just over three minutes, tied it and overage Stan Smyl provided the winner midway in the final period.

Elsewhere, Regina Pats won their second road game by surprising Flin Flon Bombers 6-2 to revive their chances in the Eastern Division and Billings Bighorns clinched a Central Division berth by edging Lethbridge Broncos 6-5.

They're at the Post: It's That Time Again

The runners will be coming out of the barns in droves Monday and the racing fans aren't about to let them down. There should be a full house and maybe a few more on hand at Exhibition Park to greet the thoroughbreds on opening day, and for more than the usual reasons.

The ink was hardly dry on the announcement from B.C. Jockey Club officials that Steve Cauthen, 17, the wonder-child of the horse-racing set, would be the featured rider for opening day when, in less than two hours, the table terrace area was sold out. That's the indicator.

Man of the year in sports in 1977, Cauthen is still the wondrous word in the jockey set, even though he isn't about to win riding honors at Santa Anita this spring. No, he has had to play second fiddle to Darrell McHargue. But this is normal. It's rare indeed when a jockey takes honors on more than one track in a season, the competition is that spirited.

Cauthen, who is scheduled to ride pre-derby favorite Affirmed in the Kentucky Derby in May, will accept several mounts on the 10-race card at Ex-Park but he won't ride in the first couple. It will be autograph time before then, Cauthen being available for half an hour after 5:30 p.m. The first 2,000 fans will receive pictures of Cauthen, on Affirmed, no less, and hopefully everyone will later be able to turn to their grandchildren, saying "there's the derby winner and his jockey. I met him when . . ."

So, it will be a big evening in racing, and possibly a million-dollar handle to boot.

Last year, when jockey Bill Shoemaker made a guest appearance at the track, the fans responded with a million, one of nine such mutuel totals rung up at the Hastings oval last season. And this one could be a topper.

Because, besides Cauthen, there's a new twist for the bettors. Well, not really new, but reborn. The daily double will return after a nine-year absence. The double is a wagering gimmick whereby the punter picks the winners of the first and second races and hopefully takes home a bundle.

The number of specialty pools will remain the same as last year. In addition to the double which replaces the quinella on the first race there will be exactor wagering on the fourth, sixth and eighth races and a quinella on the 10th.

Another change planned for Ex-Park patrons is the installation of special television monitors which will present the projected payoffs of the various combinations in the specialty pools. Now patrons will know what to expect without having to keep eyes glued on the mutuel payoff board in the infield waiting for the magic numbers to light up.

There will be a record stakes schedule of 54 races with a value of more than $900,000. This is triple the money for stakes events of just 10 years ago.

And no charge for the plug, but there is another change fans may be interested in. Doug Reid's racing broadcasts will be heard on CKWX, and not CJOR, and that is a change. Right, Jack Short?

Incidentally, Vancouver ranked fifth in the nation in the average handle per race during the 1977 season. Ex-Park punters pushed an average of $82,729 through the mutuels. Woodbine runners accounted for an average of $126,289, while Greenwood runners, Greenwood harness and Blue Bonnets harness were next in line.

And further, the B.C. economy can't be all bad when it is considered that Cloverdale Raceway and the sulkies led the nation in percentage gain in average handle per race by a whopping 35.65 per cent.

And watch for another boost this year. For, according to the latest figures, it is expected that the Cloverdale plant will average about $240,000 a day this year which is triple what it was doing three years ago.

Across the nation, the wagering public, despite all the high rollers playing the lottery game, pushed the 1977 betting mark up by 9.64 per cent to a record $1,231,501,701.

And when Cauthen rides Monday he will have a leg up on at least one Victoria horse. He has drawn the mount on Neil de Macedo's Noble Purchase.

Meanwhile, according to my old pal Horsefeathers, Dogwood Passport continues to sizzle at Santa Anita, winning his fourth last Sunday . . . The Jawl Brothers also are doing quite well . . . Victorian Image is three-for-three in California and has earned about $22,000 already this year . . . The Kentucky-bred Yeoman is also a three-time winner while a horse that may later run at Ex-Park is the $8,500 claim, Hoist The Win. The Jawls also went to $23,000 for a two-year B.C. bred colt by Gummo and acquired a four-year old filly named Feather Bow for $12,500. Feather Bow had four wins, six seconds and four shows in 19 starts in '77, and will eventually be shipped to Ex Park.

City Title To Scorpions

Scorpions rallied to score the last eight points in the final minute Wednesday night to defeat league-champion Victoria Athletics 78-75 in the deciding game of the best-of-three Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League playoff final at Victoria High School.

Dave Speed brought Scorpions to within a point with two baskets in the dying stages of the minute and John Albers scored on a tip-in with only three seconds left to give Scorpions a 76-75 lead. Athletics drew an intentional foul with one second left and Barry Burch sank both free throws to end scoring.

Speed was the over-all leader for Scorpions with 22 points, Dave Morgan contributed 18 and Ian Scott and Burch each dunked 16.

Bert Zethof led Athletics with 19 points, Jim MacKay added 14 and Tom Holmes and Duff McCaghey each fired 10.

ATHLETICS (75) — Jim MacKay 14, Tom Holmes 10, Alfred Hass 4, Bill Hingley 6, Rich Connolly 4, Duff McCaghey 10, Bert Zethof 19, Dave Wirtanen 4, Loris Corletto 4, Mike Reimer.

Manitoba Alone In Curling Lead

EDMONTON (CP) — Manitoba took over sole possession of first place Wednesday after the seventh round of the national firefighters curling championship.

The Winnipeg rink, skipped by Ernie Kovacs, scored a 6-5 win over previously-unbeaten Ontario skipped by Ed Werenich to run its record to 6-1.

Earlier in the day, Manitoba stole two in the 10th for an 8-5 win over Erich Mintzler's Saskatchewan rink.

In other seventh-round play, New Brunswick defeated Nova Scotia 9-8 and Prince Edward Island won its first game of the tournament, defeating Alberta 8-7 after Alberta skip Don Nelson missed an open takeout on his last shot.

Defending-champion Howie Brazeau from the Northwest Territories drew to the eight-foot for two and an 8-7 win over Victoria's Dick Austin, who romped to a 9-3 win over Nelson in the morning round.

Against Brazeau, Austin appeared in control with a two-point lead going into the final end without the hammer but the Victoria rink couldn't place a guard on their shot rock and the Territories skip, finding the form which had carried him into last month's Brier, came through brilliantly on the home end after holding his rink in the game in the earlier going.

Standings after Wednesday's play left Ontario in second place at 5-1, followed by B.C. at 5-2, Quebec at 4-2 and Northern Ontario 4-3. Alberta and Saskatchewan had 3-3 records followed by N.W.T. at 2-4 and Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and P.E.I., all at 1-5.

Penguins Have . . . . . . Tenuous Chance

Pressure On Canucks

By Canadian Press

Pittsburgh Penguins have, at best, a tenuous chance of achieving a playoff berth in the National Hockey League. Colorado Rockies and Vancouver Canucks are almost in the same boat, but not quite. One must fall and the pressure has shifted to the Canucks.

To say the Rockies have had trouble winning on the road this season would be an understatement. This year they have managed two wins in 38 road games.

Wednesday night, though, they managed their 12th tie on the road and moved one point ahead of idle Vancouver Canucks in the Smythe Division.

"We still have life and the pressure will be on Vancouver," said Colorado coach Pat Kelly.

"Vancouver has more wins than we do which means we have to win Saturday night in the worst way," said Kelly. Canucks have two games remaining against Los Angeles at home and away. Colorado is home to St. Louis.

Darcy Rota, Cliff Koroll, Doug Hicks and Ted Bulley scored for the Hawks. Denis Dupere, Ralph Klassen, Larry Skinner and Dave Hudson scored for Colorado who led 4-2 at one point.

However slim their chance, the Penguins are still in the playoff hunt as the final wild-card team following Wednesday's 7-2 victory over Minnesota North Stars.

The Penguins victory was without meaning until New York Rangers bowed to the streaking Atlanta Flames 4-2.

Pittsburgh, you see, now has 66 points compared to the Rangers 71. Both teams have three games remaining in their respective schedules. All the Rangers have to do is tie one of their games and they make the playoffs.

The Rangers remaining games are against Philadelphia Flyers, New York Islanders and Chicago Black Hawks. Pittsburgh faces a far easier task in Detroit Red Wings, Washington Capitals and Cleveland Barons.

"I'd have to say the pressure's on the Rangers because they have the tough games left," Wilson said.

In other NHL games Wednesday Montreal Canadiens rolled over the still slumping Toronto Maple Leafs 6-3, Detroit tied Cleveland 5-5 and St. Louis Blues defeated Los Angeles Kings 3-2.

JAPAN TRIP FOR PHILIP

Philip Delesalle of Victoria is one of two gymnasts who will represent Canada in Japan next Tuesday at the Tokyo Broadcasting Cup competition.

Diana Carnegie of Toronto is the other competitor on the Canadian squad, which will also include coaches John Herb of Victoria and Dennis Fuhrman of Toronto.

Delesalle was invited to compete by the Japan Gymnastic Association. Carnegie was selected by the Canadian Gymnastics Federation.

Mariners Start With Victory

By The Associated Press

Seattle Mariners got the jump on the rest of the American League with a 3-2 victory over Minnesota Twins Wednesday night.

"I wanted to go just six innings," said pitcher Glenn Abbott. "I'm really glad about this. Usually, I'm a slow starter."

Actually, Abbott started fast before running out of gas after 6 1-3 innings. Then manager Darrell Johnson took him out of the game.

"Abbott had thrown 100 pitches and that was enough," Johnson reasoned. "For this early in the year it was a very good game, a heck of a ballgame."

Craig Reynolds hit the first home run of the season, a two-run blast off Dave Goltz that provided Abbott with an early 3-0 cushion and the Mariners with their eventual winning run.

The Mariners and Twins continue their series tonight, along with three other contests. In American League day games, Toronto Blue Jays played at Detroit Tigers and Baltimore Orioles were at Milwaukee Brewers. Cincinnati Reds met Houston Astros in the traditional National League opener.

Graham Takes Par-3 Event

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Veteran Lou Graham won Wednesday's par three tournament among players entered in the 42nd Masters golf tournament which gets under way today.

Graham won the event in a playoff after tying 1977 Masters champion Tom Watson at five-under-par 22.

Moore, Kubicek Mourned

Al Kubicek died Sunday in Duncan at the age of 53.

Gordie Moore, who represented British Columbia in the Canadian senior men's curling playdowns in 1969 and again in 1971, died Tuesday at the age of 65.

Kubicek was well known in baseball circles. A Victoria resident until moving to Duncan recently, the was a catcher in senior circles for many years and more recently kept his hand in the game by sponsoring the Kubicek entry in the Senior Amateur League.

Moore made his greatest mark in curling but also was an enthusiastic golfer and was an excellent first baseman during his baseball-playing days.

Funeral services for Kubicek were held today. Services for Moore will be held Friday at McCall Brothers, starting at 2 p.m.

TIME FOR ARENA CRACKDOWN?

Litter Is Far From Funny

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Enough is enough!

The number of idiots who pass themselves off as hockey fans grows in total at Western Canada Hockey League games in Memorial Arena.

These are the unthinking individuals who, over the past few months, have decided that littering the ice with debris has become a sport that is looked upon with great favor by other spectators.

That is not the case.

The situation is getting out of hand, to a such a point that the Memorial Arena management should issue a crackdown order to ushers. Persons guilty of throwing debris on the ice should be escorted out of the rink and, perhaps, barred from attending future games.

Some show of emotion has to be granted the fans who come out to cheer their hockey favorites. Nobody would have minded, for example, the shower of programs that littered the ice Tuesday after George Fritz scored a goal in sudden-death overtime to give Victoria Cougars a 4-3 playoff victory over Portland Winter Hawks.

Littering the ice after each hometown goal doesn't make sense. That foolish habit is one reason Tuesday's game ended at 11:41, about 40 minutes later than it normally would have finished.

The Cougars do not appreciate it. In addition to the always-present threat of serious injury resulting from debris on the ice, the ice-clearing stoppages can affect the tone of the game.

Two third-period stoppages, for example, did nothing for the Cougars and, instead, benefitted Portland. In each case, the Cougars had been applying pressure in the Portland zone. The lengthy waits, as the rink-rats cleared the ice, enabled Portland aces Wayne Babych and Paul Mulvey to acquire well-deserved rests and then return to action sooner that expected.

On both occasions, Babych and Mulvey were instrumental into shifting the pressure onto Victoria goaltender Kevin Eastman.

The resting benefits, however, are not nearly as important or as serious as the danger of players being injured.

Programs, coffee, soft drinks, toilet paper, popcorn, hard candy and coins were among things constantly being cleared away by rink attendants and game officials.

One fan was escorted out of the rink when he was detected throwing debris on the ice. That is how it should be.

That California Rugby Has Impressive Power

RUGBY

Well, the big, bad Bays are back, gearing up for Saturday's seven-a-side tournament and still shaking their heads at the might of California rugby.

Those of us in Victoria used to the somewhat bull-in-a-chinashop approach to the game displayed by American teams playing here might wonder how on earth a side like James Bay Athletic Association could lose in a tournament in a place called Monterey.

"I think when Americans come up here they tend to be somewhat awestruck," explains the Bays' coach Tillman Briggs. "They think we're going to do a lot of things to them. But down there they're a different cat altogether.

"Their standards are higher than ours — absolutely no doubt about it. Perhaps the finesse is lacking but it's more than made up for by their size and speed.

"You know, it doesn't matter how many teams you meet, it's like you're always playing the same one," Briggs says with a grin. "Their forwards are all big and their backs fast. They all run hard and tackle well. All the teams use the same kind of style and there's very little difference between their best and their worst.

"For example, we played the University of California (Davis campus) in the first round of the tournament in Monterey and had a tough time beating them. They were solid opposition and could finish at least second or third in our league here. Yet they placed 31st out of 32 teams in Monterey."

James Bay, long regarded as the best club side in Canada and recently honored as team-of-the-year at the Victoria Sports Celebrity Dinner, did well in the Monterey tourney, which was widely touted as the North American club championship. The Bays won four straight matches before going down 18-9 to Old Blues, a team of former University of California (all campuses) players in the final.

"Yes, naturally we were disappointed with the result," Briggs says. "But they were good and it was a fair result."

And there were three positive things about the California visit.

Briggs took along a Victoria High School team which comfortably downed three American schools that are very strong in football but just getting into rugby.

His Bays later defeated the Old Blues (neither side was exactly the same lineup as in the tourney) 24-10 in an exhibition rematch.

And plans are under way for a return visit to Victoria by both Santa Monica and the Old Blues.

"We hope these visits can be arranged," says Briggs, "because this is good solid rugby which fans here would find exciting."

Thirteen other teams (all from this side of the water) will join the Bays in the Vancouver Island Rugby Union's annual seven-a-side tournament Saturday.

"We had hoped to include a few outside clubs but in Vancouver they're involved in their semi-final playoffs and there's a tournament in Oregon," organizer Brent Johnston of Oak Bay told me.

Play gets under way at 11:30 a.m. at Windsor and Carnarvon Parks, moves to the UVic fields later and winds up with finals from 3 p.m. back at Windsor.

Seven-a-side play is fast and furious so there should be plenty of action for even the most casual rugby fan.

Sonics Get Playoff Spot

By The Associated Press

Atlanta Hawks and Seattle Superonics are in the National Basketball Association playoffs and coach Hubie Brown of Atlanta credits Calvin Coolidge for it.

"This has been a miracle," said Brown after the Hawks defeated Buffalo Braves 87-74 Wednesday night to eliminate New Orleans and secure Atlanta's first playoff berth in five seasons.

"There's been a quote we've carried with us all year," said Brown. "It's from Calvin Coolidge and it's a hell of a quote: 'There's nothing more common than unsuccessful people with potential.'

"Our goal was to be successful without potential."

The Hawks accomplished that thanks to Brown's masterful coaching and the hustling of such unknowns as John Drew, Steve Hawes and Eddie Johnson. Drew and Hawes scored 21 and 20 points, respectively, in the victory over Buffalo and Johnson added 12 points and eight assists.

A 'Dirty' Yankee Fight

BALTIMORE (AP) — George Steinbrenner and Gabe Paul have engaged in a "dirty and very bloody" quarrel over the sale of stock in New York Yankees, The Sun says.

Paul, who moved from the Yankees to become president of Cleveland Indians, still owns stock in both clubs, a violation of baseball rules.

The newspaper says Steinbrenner thinks Paul's asking price is too high, while the Indian president finds it insulting that Steinbrenner would expect to purchase the stock at its original price.

"They're going around and around on the price," one club official told The Sun. "I've heard George offered Gabe $60,000 a unit and Gabe blew his top. He wants $110,000.

"It's getting dirty and very bloody. When it will get settled, I don't know. I suspect the league will let the thing drag on until it is settled."

Paul only has until the Indians' Saturday opener to get rid of his Yankee holdings.

"I have a buyer," Paul said. "We're hopeful of consummating the deal very shortly."

Steinbrenner is said to want the stock as part of a plan eventually to gain total control of the Yankees.

Leafs, A's To Try Again

Question: When is the deciding game in a best-of-seven playoff series not the final game?

Answer: When you don't have enough ice time for overtime.

League-champion Esquimalt Maple Leafs and Victoria Athletics played to a 3-3 deadlock in what was scheduled to be the rubber game in the South Island Big Six Hockey League final series Wednesday night at Memorial Arena.

Officials have now scheduled a tie-breaker game which starts at 8:30 p.m. Saturday on the same ice — this time with provision for overtime.

Jerry Blanchette, Bob Martin and Gerry Caldwell scored for Leafs and Brian Hamilton, Bryon Preston and Gord Neilson replied for Athletics.

Forest Near League Title

LONDON (Reuter) — Nottingham Forest made almost certain of becoming English League Soccer champions for the first time in the club's history by winning 1-0 at Aston Villa Wednesday night.

Everton, Forest's only serious rivals, lost 1-0 at home to defending champion Liverpool. Forest now has a four-point lead over Everton and eight games to play. Everton has just five matches left and the other teams have only a mathematical chance of overhauling Forest.

David Johnson, former Everton player, scored the goal against his old club after 13 minutes. He later had to be treated on the touchline after being struck in the face by a missile from the crowd.

Tony Woodcock scored Forest's only goal in the second half but Brian Clough's team produced one of their less impressive performances.

Even if Everton wins all its remaining games, Forest needs only another seven points for the title and the possibility of them slipping up now is very remote.

'Something Crazy' —Accused Killer

VANCOUVER (CP) — The man charged with the murder last summer of four teen-agers near Chilliwack told his brother shortly after the slayings that he had "done something crazy."

John Madsen told a British Columbia Supreme Court jury Wednesday that his brother, Walter Murray Madsen, was waiting at John's home in Richmond when he returned home about 1 a.m. July 19, about three hours after the killings.

When Walter asked that they have a private conversation, the two went for a drive, his brother testified.

John said neither talked very much but Walter, after some prompting, told him: "I've done something crazy."

He said he then told his brother that he didn't want to hear about it because he thought the accused was going to say something about family troubles.

Walter, 24, is being tried for the murder of Evert Den Hertog, 19, his brother Jan, 16, Bert Menger, 19, and Leola Guliker, 16. The girl's body was the only one of the three not recovered.

Examinations of the recovered bodies indicated that the three died of bullet wounds received when the group was attacked while drinking beer along the banks of the Fraser River.

Yvonne Madsen, John's wife, testified that Walter drove up to her home in a two-ton green truck at about 11:30 p.m. the night of the slayings. He then took some objects from the back of the truck and entered her carport, she said.

Mrs. Madsen said that when Walter drove away, she went to the carport and saw a rifle, a flight bag containing ammunition and a bicycle.

She said Walter seemed "very calm, very quiet".

Mrs. Madsen said she later heard John telling his brother: "There are the blankets. Make up the bed. I don't want to hear anything."

A fingerprint specialist told the jury and Justice J. E. Gould that Walter Madsen's fingerprint was found on the pickup truck, which was owned by Evert Den Hertog. That truck was driven to the scene by the teen-agers and driven away after the shootings.

The trial continues.

CABBIES PARADE FOR SLAIN DRIVER

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nearly 200 taxicabs, black ribbons fluttering on their hoods, swelled a funeral procession Wednesday that stretched more than a mile after the drivers paid their last respects to Thomas Mah Tang, their slain co-worker.

Tang, 26, emigrated to Vancouver from Hong Kong and drove for Yellow Cab. He was fatally wounded by a passenger March 29 after apparently refusing to hand over between $60 and $70 in fare receipts.

He died Friday.

Almost exactly five years ago, Muk Chee Tam was fatally wounded by a passenger. Tam also was 26, was born in Hong Kong, drove a Yellow Cab and was attacked on an April night in downtown Vancouver.

"That musn't happen again," said owner-operator Bill Couman after Tang's funeral.

"Tom Tang was a really nice kid. I hope to God they catch his killer and he doesn't get off on a bungled case like the last time. Seems to us there's more concern for the accused than for the victim in these things."

As well as driving a cab, Tang was an apprentice auto mechanic and planned to take formal technical courses when he could afford it.

Meanwhile, most of his money was being sent to Hong Kong, where his mother, two sisters and brother lived. They attended his funeral using some of that money and donations from Tang's fellow drivers to cover the flight costs.

Union Bias Claim Dismissed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board dismissed a complaint against a contractor accused of discriminating against union workers but, at the same time, rejected the contractor's argument that he was being discriminated against by unions.

The United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America filed the complaint against Martin Reid, owner of Reid's Renovations Co., after union business agent Jeff Roger was told a job being offered by Reid was non-union.

In filing the complaint, the union asked for a cease-and-desist order against Reid, certification of the union and damages of $25,000.

In dismissing the complaint, board chairman Paul Weiler said: "It would be an understatement to describe those proposed remedies as pure overkill for what occurred here."

There was, however, another question.

"If I were to approach a union job site to apply for work as a carpenter, they would not hire me unless I was a member of the union," reasoned Reid. "Is this not in turn a form of discrimination on the part of the unions?"

Said Weiler: "The simple fact is that these two situations are not considered parallel under Canadian labor law."

The Labor Code upholds the legality of collective agreements requiring union membership as a condition of employment, Weiler noted.

"It is because of that specific statutory exemption that closed shop arrangements are immune from complaints under. . . the Labor Code," he wrote.

Reid told the board that he did not feel he was discriminating against union members when he said the job was non-union.

"I was not aware, as probably many people are not, that union members can work on a non-union job as I thought it was against the union rules, or, that to inform them that the job is non-union would be a form of discrimination," he said.

The two men's recollections of the conversation at the job site differed greatly.

The board would have to reconstruct Reid's exact words to determine if he had a discriminatory motive for not hiring union members, Weiler wrote.

"To say the least, that is a rather difficult task to undertake some months after this brief encounter took place," he wrote.

Separate Fisheries Branch Established

The separation of the fish and wildlife branch into separate organizations in recognition of the role fisheries plays in B.C.'s economy was announced Wednesday by Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf.

"The new fisheries branch will combine responsibility for fresh water and saltwater fisheries, sport and commercial fishermen, and processors for the first time," Bawlf said in a news release.

These responsibilities are currently split between the fish and wildlife branch and the marine resources branch.

"A new, fully integrated provincial fisheries branch is required to meet the needs and potential of this resource," said Bawlf.

He said the wildlife branch will be responsible for management of all provincial wildlife other than fish.

He also said a chief conservation officer will be appointed to direct conservation enforcement, and will report directly to the deputy minister on enforcement methods and procedures, training of conservation officers and coordination with other law enforcement agencies.

Waterland Attacked Over Dams

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sierra Club says Forests Minister Tom Waterland has remained silent while the British Columbia government makes plans to flood much forest land in order to develop power projects.

Robert Nixon, regional conservation representative of the club's Western Canada chapter, has written to the minister asking why he endorses the opinion that forest land cannot be set aside for parks while he says nothing about alienation of forests for power projects.

Waterland, through his executive assistant Landis Smith, denied Wednesday that he has ever been against all further land removal from forests.

"The minister says that removals must be subject to close scrutiny and the best use of the land must be determined," said Smith. "Best use is in the terms of general benefit to the people of B.C."

Nixon wrote that the club is concerned that Waterland "is not addressing the substantive issues upon which hinge the preservation of a viable forest economy."

The club drew Waterland's attention to an advertisement placed in a Toronto newspaper by the B.C. economic development ministry entitled Energy From British Columbia Could Fuel Your Future.

The advertisement indicates that the government will be spending billions of dollars over the next 10 years on power developments such as hydro-electric plants.

NDP Drops Veitch Case

The NDP has decided to drop its opposition to Elwood Veitch (SC—Burnaby-Willingdon) as chairman of the legislature's committee on Crown corporations.

Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminister) said Wednesday he and other NDP MLAs felt the committee would break down on partisan grounds if their opposition continued.

Norm Levi (NDP—Vancouver-Burrard) last week called for Veitch's resignation after it was disclosed he had hired two of his former campaign workers to act as $30-an-hour consultants to the committee. The consultants finish their work this week.

Cocke said his party decided that Veitch should be given a second chance.

At an in camera session Wednesday, the committee, with its Social Credit majority, passed a resolution that any staff hired in the future should first be cleared by a subcommittee.

The committee also decided not to interview officials of the B.C. Housing Corp. today as scheduled, but will meet with them next week.

NDP members opposed closure of the session Wednesday.

Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said the committee was setting a dangerous precedent by deciding to hold in camera meetings, and refused to attend.

Committee members were to meet privately today with their staff.

IWA Attacked By Phillips

Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Wednesday the International Woodworkers of America is responsible for the loss of 120 jobs in two Vancouver Island sawmills.

Phillips said the IWA forced the two mills, located in Ladysmith and Cowichan, to curtail their operations to five days a week from seven.

The move resulted in the loss of 120 jobs and almost $3 million in wages, he said.

The minister said he would like to see the B.C. Federation of Labor intervene to see if the mills could be allowed to resume seven-day-a-week operation.

Wyman Trineer, IWA regional secretary-treasurer, said later that Phillips' assertions are ridiculous. He said the workers requested the five-day week, using the collective bargaining process.

Trineer said he questions whether the two mills mentioned by the minister were working at full capacity seven days a week.

Paperwork Cutter Named

OTTAWA (CP) — A 50-year-old civil servant, James Howe, was named Wednesday as the government's Controller of Paperburden to try to cut the paperwork small and medium-sized businesses face.

Anthony Abbott, small business minister, said in a statement the government predicts a saving of $100 million a year for each of the next two years by cutting out some of the paperwork businessmen have complained about for decades.

Howe, who moves to his new job from the regional economic expansion department, will work out of Abbott's ministry.

Abbott says the government has already identified legislation, inadequate management and poor information practices as the root problems that create a paper burden for small businessmen. Howe is to help simplify existing documents the government requires and to encourage more data-sharing by the various federal departments.

Howe has both private and public sector work experience. Between 1953 and 1968, he was a major shareholder and a management member of Empire Freightways Ltd. and Empire Petroleum, both of Saskatoon.

In 1968, he returned to university to study economics, then in 1971 joined the federal government and worked in the industry department as well as at regional economic expansion, where his last assignment was director-general of project assessment and evaluation.

Rooney To Run Again

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Dave Rooney, Liberal member of the Commons for Bonavista-Trinity-Conception, edged seven persons to win the party's nomination for the riding in the next federal election.

The results were announced by Dr. Hubert Kitchen, president of the Newfoundland Liberal Association, about midnight Wednesday night.

On Feb. 1, Rooney was charged with influence-peddling following an investigation initiated by House of Commons Speaker James Jerome.

Musical Instrument Fraud Court-Martial Centrepiece

By KEN POLE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A $250,000 fraud involving two huge truckloads of musical equipment and supplies is to be the centrepiece of the court martial April 18 of a warrant officer at Canadian Forces Base Rockcliffe.

WO Kenneth Cooper was charged after an extensive RCMP investigation, but when Progressive Conservative MP Tom Cossitt brought the issue up in the Commons Wednesday, he failed to pry any details out of Defence Minister Barney Danson.

About the only thing Danson would confirm was that Cooper had been charged, but anything else "will likely come out in the court martial," which is to be held publicly.

Allan MacKinnon, the Tory defence critic who is a former Canadian officer, said courts martial usually are held in public, but the reason they don't normally receive much publicity is that the Forces don't generally announce that they are being held.

Cossitt, who has maintained a very low profile ever since the government decided not to press charges under the Official Secrets Act last month for his part in revelations about Soviet espionage in Canada, has been pursuing the Cooper case for some months.

Wednesday, he asked about "the embezzlement and conversion of public funds" alleged to have taken place at CFB Rockcliffe and wanted Danson to come up with some more names, the nature of the charges and "why it has taken so long for this matter to come to a head since I first raised it in the House."

The defence minister retorted only that it was an RCMP investigation, not the Leeds MP's questions, that had brought about the charge aginst Cooper. Danson would neither confirm Cossitt's "estimated $250,000" figure nor comment on the alleged involvement of "certain civilians" in the case.

Cossitt, however, is on record as saying that a raid at the Rockcliffe base in mid-December turned up "thousands of dollars of allegedly improperly purchased musical and electronic equipment." Danson admitted at the time that the goods had been bought with misappropriated government funds, but that about $115,000 worth of the loss had been recovered.

Cossitt said Wednesday that an entire room at the base was used to stockpile the instruments and equipment and that two large army trucks were needed to haul it away.

Although the Tory MP refused to comment further outside the House for fear of leaving himself open to prosecution, he did say that the civilians apparently involved are in "the musical instrument business."

The RCMP are understood to have recommended that other persons be charged, but this could not be confirmed.

Neutron Issue In Air

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is "still evolving" its position on the controversial neutron warhead, Defence Minister Barney Danson said Wednesday.

Danson said to reporters that "we aren't being rushed into a decision on such an important matter."

The United States has been talking with its NATO allies for some months about deploying the weapon in Europe. Danson has refused to say for months what Canada's view is about production of the weapon.

There have been reports that President Carter has decided to reject proposals for producing the enhanced radiation weapon which can kill people with minimum damage to property. But some top Carter administration officials have said the decision has not yet been made.

Danson said Canada recognizes the "military utility" of the weapon. But this country was not directly affected as Canada was not a nuclear nation and the neutron weapon would not be placed on Canadian soil.

"This is a matter of active concern," the minister said.

However, when people talk of the morality of using the neutron warhead, they should also look at recent Soviet nuclear missiles, Danson said.

Trudeau Snubs FLQ Claims

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau Wednesday brushed off as totally fabricated and unrealistic an accusation that police knew the location of kidnap victims during the 1970 October crisis in Quebec.

The prime minister was answering questions from Rene Matte (SC—Champlain) who said the accusation was made on a Radio-Canada program Tuesday night by former members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Trudeau also challenged Matte, who has been raising questions about the October crisis for years, to take any information he has to the McDonald commission into police wrondoing.

It is the first time the prime minister has suggested that the commission, investigating activities of the RCMP, be used to look into the crisis that evolved from the kidnapping of British trade commissioner James Cross and Quebec Labor Minister Pierre LaPorte.

The questioning revolves around the appearance of Jacques Cossette-Trudel and his wife Louise Lanctot on Radio-Canada. They said they sought to "demystify" the story of the 1970 crisis.

The two, who face charges of kidnapping Cross if they returned to Canada as they desire, said they were surprised at the kidnapping of LaPorte by another FLQ group.

My wife likes to come with me when I go to Vancouver, so we stay at the Four Seasons.

The shopping is great—lots of boutiques and specialty shops in the adjoining Pacific Centre Mall. The theatre district and Gastown are close, too. It's all very handy. Right in the heart of things in Vancouver.

As for me—well, the hotel itself is my ideal, of course. The service is impeccable. The atmosphere, restrained elegance. My wife and I love to dine in Le Pavillon and relax together later in the recreational spa. I like being there—because I feel they like my being there, too.

We think the Four Seasons is the best hotel in Vancouver.

Pensioners On Welfare

OTTAWA (CP) — An organization of railway pensioners said Wednesday many of its members are forced to seek welfare and other government handouts because Canadian National and Canadian Pacific are playing fast and loose with pension funds.

J. Earl White, president of the Canadian Railways Employee's Pension Association, told the Commons transport committee the two railways owe nearly $2 billion to their employee pension funds and that the amount is growing by tens of millions of dollars each year.

White said that instead of matching employee contributions into the pension fund each year, the railways were using the money for their own needs, paying the pension fund interest at far below market rates.

He said thousands of former railway employees have never received increases in their pensions although their contributions, invested and controlled by the railways, were earning investment returns at nearly twice the four per cent annual rate originally estimated.

White said in an interview later there are about 39,000 former CN employees on pension and about 25,000 retired CP employees.

There was all-party agreement to a suggestion by Dan McKenzie (PC-Winnipeg South Centre), party railway pension critic, that the committee investigate the issue further.

Paul McRae (L-Fort William) said there appeared to be "plenty of evidence" of a problem that "should be looked at very seriously."

Les Benjamin (NDP-Regina-Lake Centre), a railway station agent and telegrapher from 1946-61, said the railways had long been failing to pay money owed to the funds and in any other organization "it would be called stealing."

New Cosmos Aloft

MOSCOW (AFP) — The Soviet Union has launched another satellite, the Cosmos-1001, and the equipment on board is working normally.

PULLOUT URGED

QUEBEC (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress wants Canada to pull out of NORAD and to reduce its military role in NATO.

The congress's foreign policy stand, adopted at the CLC convention Wednesday, also calls for defence spending to be cut "to the smallest level consistent with the need for security."

"The congress is convinced that the only road to lasting peace and a healthy world economy is balanced and planned disarmement," says the statement.

The CLC is also urging the world community to ostracize South Africa, Chile and Argentine for their records on human and political rights.

Speedy Senate Nod For Pipeline Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate whipped the government's northern pipeline legislation through two readings Wednesday, giving it approval in principle and sending it off to committee for detailed study.

The senators gave special unanimous consent to allow quick handling of the legislation only moments after the bill was received from the House of Commons.

The Commons gave final approval late Tuesday to the legislation, which paves the way for construction of a $10 billion pipeline to carry Alaskan natural gas across Canada to markets in the United States.

In the Senate, government leader Senator Ray Perrault said there was no rigid timetable requiring the bill to be rushed through.

"There is a feeling, however, that we should indicate to the country our full support for this project, and we can do that by getting on with the job, by moving as quickly as possible on this measure," Perrault said.

During the second reading debate, Senator G. I. (Ike) Smith, a former premier of Nova Scotia, urged that the Senate set up its own committee to oversee construction of the line.

The bill was amended as it passed through the Commons, providing a special committee that will review the work of the monitoring agency set up to regulate the pipeline planning and construction.

"We would be remiss if we did not equip ourselves in the same way," said Senator Smith.

Smith said the bill "conforms substantially" to what his party felt should be included in the legislation and he was willing to give approval-in-principle.

But it was possible he would suggest changes later after giving detailed study to the bill.

Yukon Pushes Provincial Status

WHITEHORSE (CP) — The task force on national unity was told today that the Yukon must become Canada's 11th province to assume the basic democratic right of self-government.

The standing committee on constitutional development for the Yukon said in a brief to the task force that the territory "can no longer tolerate having our lives run by Ottawa bureaucrats thousands of miles away who are unaware of our real concerns."

The committee, made up of six members of the Yukon legislative assembly, said the problems facing Quebec are similar to those encountered by the territory — both want to redefine federal relationships and to be accepted as part of Canada on their terms.

The committee said the assembly has voted unanimously for Yukon's inclusion into Confederation as a province.

The committee said it is ironic that while Quebec is being told it cannot withdraw from Confederation "we in the north are told by those same people that we cannot become part of Confederation."

"Premier Levesque and the Parti Quebecois claim that the people of Quebec cannot escape colonial status unless they create a separate nation for themselves," the brief said.

"If Monsieur Levesque wished to see colonialism in its true form he should look to Yukon. It might well give him pause to reflect on Quebec's comparably favorable position."

The Yukon has had "60 years of colonial stagnation while the provinces have kept their steady growth pattern, starting from the firm base of provincial rights," the committee said.

THE GYPSIES RETURN TO MONTREAL

MONTREAL (CP) — The Petrov family, a 22-member clan of Yugoslavian gypsies who entered Canada illegally in 1976, have returned to Montreal after an unsuccessful transcontinental search for a permanent home.

The family, who originally sought political refugee status, were ordered deported shortly after their arrival two years ago on the grounds they entered with stolen passports.

Andre Guenet, an official with the federal manpower and immigration department, said Wednesday the case is being reviewed at an immigration hearing in Montreal this week.

But even if the inquiry orders the Petrovs deported again, immigration authorities may be unable to act since no country has yet agreed to accept them, Guenet said.

The family of horse traders, carpet sellers and palm readers arrived back in Montreal last weekend and are living in three apartments in suburban Longueuil.

After their original deportation order, the family was sent to an immigration centre in Quebec City for several weeks. After being released pending a decision on their case, the Petrovs slipped out of Canada.

They spent nine months in a gypsy commune near Chicago where they sold enough carpets to pay for a Canada-wide tour. After spending some time in British Columbia they headed back east, allegedly leaving a trail of disgruntled motel owners with unpaid bills.

In Toronto, they teamed up with another gypsy family, the six-member Sandrinovich clan who came to Montreal with them.

How Your Garden Grows

Proper lawn care

From early spring until fall, your lawn needs continuous care if it is to remain green and healthy–

Spring renovation. Most lawns become compacted over the winter months, and the grass suffers from a lack of aeration. This can be remedied by punching holes in the turf with an aerator or digging fork. Next, rake to remove aerator plugs and thatch (accumulated clippings, etc.). Then, mow the lawn to improve its ragged appearance and give grass an even start.

Spring is also the time for Green Valley Dolomite Lime. Apply at the rate of 4 lbs. (1.75 kg) per 100 square feet (9m²) and water in. After two weeks, apply Green Valley Super Lawn Builder 12-4-8 at 1 lb. (.45 kg) per 100 square feet (9m²) and water thoroughly. In another three weeks, your lawn will be thick and healthy.

If your lawn is uneven, you may apply a top dressing of screened compost or a 50-50 mix of peat and sand. However, this is not recommended unless the lawn needs levelling. Where top dressing is over one inch deep, scratch in a little Penn-High Lawn Seed.

During the growing season. Proper watering is essential for a healthy lawn. A good soaking once a week during dry weather is recommended, ideally on a cloudy or cool day to avoid excessive evaporation. Do not sprinkle lightly, as this encourages shallow rooting. Fertilizing is also important. Three applications of Green Valley Super Lawn Builder 12-4-8–in April, July and September–will maintain healthy, thick turf. If your lawn is growing vigorously, be sure to mow often–twice a week if necessary. If using a reel type mower, remove cuttings. With a rotary mower, cuttings may be left on lawn.

Fall care. To bring your lawn through the winter in the best possible condition, apply Green Valley Winter & Spring Lawn Food 3-15-6 at the rate of 2 lbs. (.9 kg) per 100 square feet (9m²). October is the month for this final step.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 16-year-old boy charged in the stabbing of an 11-year-old girl in Saanich has been remanded until May 4 for a psychiatric examination at the Forensic Psychiatric Institute in Port Coquitlam.

The judge was told the accused is a temporary ward of the human resources ministry.

The boy is charged with attempted robbery with violence and wounding with intent to cause bodily harm.

The youth, whose name cannot be published because he is a juvenile, was arrested by Saanich police following an incident Tuesday afternoon in which a girl was stabbed as she walked through an access tunnel near the Town and Country shopping centre.

Judge Blake Allan sentenced a 31-year-old man to six months in jail after a guilty plea was entered to possession of stolen stereo equipment.

Lawyer Dean Wilson elected trial by magistrate for Claude Joseph Myette, 885 Craigflower, and then, in a surprise move, asked to be taken off the record.

Wilson said he wanted to remove himself because Myette wouldn't accept his advice as to plea.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang told the court Myette and a companion tried to sell — for #10 — the turntable, amplifier and speakers valued at $500 and stolen from a break-in March 21 at an apartment in the same block where Myette had been living.

Lang related a criminal history for Myette which dated back to Oct. 24, 1966, when he received a suspended sentence for auto theft in Montreal. Myette was fined $25 for theft on Nov. 25, 1966, in Montreal, fined $50 for breach of the Juvenile Delinquents Act on Jan. 12, 1968, in Montreal, sentenced to 15 days in jail for the same offence on Feb. 12, 1968, in Montreal, sentenced to 20 months for robbery with violence on Aug. 25, 1971, in Winnipeg, fined $100 for possession of narcotics on Oct. 6, 1976, in Vancouver, fined $500 for the same offence on May 18, 1977, in Vancouver, and sentenced to six months in jail for possession of a narcotic for the purpose of trafficking on July 20, 1977, in Victoria.

Asked by Allan when he got out of jail, Myette told the judge it was Feb. 27.

"It certainly didn't take you very long to get into trouble again," Allan observed.

Paul Victor Wayne Holm, 17, jointly charged with Myette, was denied bail. His preliminary hearing was set for April 21.

A 36-year-old man who pleaded guilty to two counts of driving while his licence was suspended and one count each of impaired driving, driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 and refusing a breath test was given concurrent, 45-day jail terms by Allan.

John Glen Poirier, 1921 Fernwood, entered the guilty pleas through lawyer Bruce McConnan, who said his client suffered from emotional problems.

Lang said the charges stemmed from two separate incidents, one on Oct. 29, 1977, in Vancouver and the other on Feb. 22 in Victoria. He informed the court Poirier was given a one-day jail sentence and fined $500 on Feb. 21, 1974, in Vancouver for dangerous driving and failing to remain at the scene of an accident and was also fined $500 for impaired driving April 22, 1977, at Ganges.

In addition, Burke was given a suspended sentence, six months probation and 60 hours of community service work after pleading guilty to hit and run.

Forest Deputy Calls It Quits After 39 Years

John Stokes, deputy minister of forests for the last eight years, has retired after 39 years as an employee of the British Columbia government, the forest ministry announced Tuesday.

A ministry news release said Stokes played a prominent role in the development of utilization policies for the province's forest resources.

Born in Victoria, he served in the Royal Canadian Air Force during the Second World War before rejoining the forest service in 1946. He became deputy minister in August, 1969.

craig claiborne

Take it from this prophet: If you want to know the name of the best buy among meat and poultry the rest of the year it inevitably will be chicken.

Chicken has traditionally succored the poor in years that are lean. By contrast it has for centuries delighted the palates of the royally robed as well, in the form of such dishes as supremes de volaille Polignac (chicken breasts with mushrooms and truffles in cream sauce) and poulet reine saute a l'archiduc (sauteed chicken in a madeira-flavored cream sauce).

As chicken broth it has, for countless generations, been nourishment and balm for mind and body and made those who imbibe feel whole again. If proof were needed as to the appeal of chicken for the masses, consider Colonel Sanders and Kentucky Fried.

The various kitchen uses to which chickens can be put are virtually limitless. Indeed, volumes could be written about chicken breasts alone, and the recipes on this page are based on chicken breasts, which are also inexpensive.

CHICKEN BREASTS PORTUGAISE

5 tablespoons butter or chicken fat
2½ cups (2 medium-sized) thinly sliced onion
3 cups cored, seeded green peppers, cut into thin strips (or use sweet red peppers, if available, to give color)
3 cups thinly sliced mushrooms
2 tablespoons finely minced garlic
2 cups whole canned tomatoes, preferable Italian peeled tomatoes
4 whole chicken breasts, skinned and boned and split in half
2 shallots, finely chopped
⅓ cup dry white wine
⅓ cup chicken broth
Finely chopped parsley for garnish.

1. Preheat the oven to 400 degrees.

2. Heat one tablespoon of butter (or use chicken fat) in a saucepan and add the onion, green or red pepper, salt and pepper. Cook, stirring, about three minutes, until crisp tender. Add the mushrooms and stir, cooking about one minute. Add the garlic, cook one minute, then add the tomatoes. Add salt and pepper to taste and cover. Bake 20 minutes. Remove the saucepan to the top of the stove and uncover. Cook, stirring occasionally, about 10 minutes.

3. Melt two tablespoons of butter (or more if you think it necessary) in one large or two small heavy skillets. Add the chicken, skinned side down, and cover over moderate heat until that side is a gentle brown, three to five minutes. Turn the pieces. Cook until that side is lightly browned and chicken is done. Do not overcook.

4. Transfer the chicken to a warm platter and cover to keep warm.

5. Add the shallots to the skillet and stir. Pour in the white wine and stir to dissolve any brown particles that may cling to the bottom of the skillet. Let the wine reduce almost completely and add the chicken stock. Let this cook until it is almost totally reduced. Add the tomato sauce and bring to a boil. Swirl in the remaining two tablespoons of butter, shaking the skillet. Return the chicken to the skillet and spoon the sauce over. Serve the sauce over the chicken with saffron rice on the side. Sprinkle with parsley.

Yield: 8 servings.

OVEN-BAKED CHICKEN

1 three-and-one-half-pound chicken, cut into serving pieces
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 cups potatoes cut into one-inch cubes
6 mushrooms, about one-quarter pound
3 cloves garlic, unpeeled
½ teaspoon marjoram or chopped rosemary
Juice of half a lemon
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
½ cup chicken broth

1. Preheat the oven to 400 degrees.

2. Sprinkle the chicken pieces with salt and pepper. Heat the oil in a large, heavy skillet and add the chicken pieces skin side down. Cook about eight to 10 minutes until nicely browned.

3. As the chicken cooks, drop the cubed potatoes into cold water. Bring to the boil and drain. Set aside. Cut the mushrooms into quarters. There should be about one and one-half cups.

4. When the chicken pieces are browned, turn the pieces skin side up and scatter the potatoes and mushrooms around the pieces. Add the garlic and sprinkle with marjoram. Bake 30 minutes.

5. Add the chiken broth and bring to the boil on top of the stove. Remove the chicken pieces to a hot platter. Add the lemon juice to the sauce. Pour the sauce over the chicken and sprinkle with parsley.

Yield: 4 servings.

STUFFED CHICKEN BREASTS

The filling:

¼ pound shredded gruyere or Swiss cheese, about 1½ cups
¼ pound boiled ham, about ¼ inch thick, cut into six rectangles that measure about 1 by 3 inches

The chicken breasts:

3 whole or 6 halved chicken breasts, 3 to 4 pounds with bone in or about 2 to 2½ pounds already skinned and boned
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

The breading:

2 large eggs
¼ cup water
½ cup flour
3 cups bread crumbs

The frying:

Peanut, vegetable or corn oil for deep frying.

1. Shred the cheese and cut ham for the filling and have the ingredients ready.

2. Prepare the chicken breasts for stuffing. Place the chicken breasts between sheets of plastic wrap and pound lightly with a flat mallet to make them larger. Sprinkle the chicken breasts with salt and pepper.

3. Spoon one tablespoon of shredded cheese in the centre of each chicken breast. Cover with one rectangle of ham. Spoon another tablespoon of cheese on top of each piece of ham. Fold the edges of the chicken breasts over to enclose the filling. Place the stuffed chicken breasts briefly in the freezer before breading them.

4. Beat the eggs with the water in a flat container. Dip the stuffed chicken breasts first in flour to coat well, then in the egg mixture, coating all over. Finally, roll them in bread crumbs.

5. Cook in deep fat until golden brown and cooked through, 10 minutes, more or less, depending on the size of the stuffed pieces.

Yield: 6 servings.

CHICKEN SAUTE WASHINGTON

3 to 4 ears cooked corn, or use one 10-ounce package frozen whole kernel corn.
1 two and one-half pound chicken cut into serving pieces
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons butter
1 tablespoon finely chopped shallots
2 tablespoons bourbon whisky
2 cups heavy cream.

1. Slice the corn off the cob. There should be about one and one-half cups. Or defrost the frozen corn according to package directions.

2. Sprinkle the chicken with salt and pepper.

3. Heat the butter in a heavy skillet and add the chicken pieces, skin side down. Cook to brown on one side and reduce the heat. Continue cooking, turning the pieces as necessary, until they are cooked through.

4. Pour off the fat from the skillet and add the shallots, stirring briefly. Add the whisky and stir to dissolve brown particles that cling to the bottom and sides of the skillet. Add the cream, salt and pepper and cook down about 10 minutes, stirring with a wooden spoon. Strain the sauce through a sieve and into a saucepan.

5. Add the corn to the sauce and heat without boiling. Pour the sauce over the chicken and serve.

Do-It-Yourself Salad

When it comes to salads, it's nice to have an option. Most people would prefer to toss it themselves, tossing in things that interest them and tossing out the cucumber or the tomato or the leeks or the flavoured croutons they don't like. Or that don't like them.

It would seem sensible, then, to assemble salad ingredients separately on a platter and give family and guests the chance to make a collection, or selection, of their own preferences. After all, all these things are good for young and old. Might as well make it possible for each to have whatever tastes good to him or her.

What will taste especially good to young and old, finicky or sophisticated, adventurous or not, is a salad dressing that seems to span all tastes. Some restaurants, recognizing its rare quality, have announced it as the "house dressing." Anybody's house is where it fits in.

What gives the dressing "dressing" is the addition of a very special seasoning ingredient. All of us have sampled a dish in someone else's home, or in a restaurant, and instantly noted that it had something. Something good, something we had no idea how to duplicate.

Well, with this salad dressing the secret is in the addition of the liquid spice known all over the world as aromatic bitters.

VINAIGRETTE

63 ml. (¼ cup) oil
63 ml. (¼ cup) cider vinegar
5 ml. (1 tsp.) aromatic bitters
15 ml. (1 tbsp.) chopped green onions
2.5 ml. (½ tsp.) salt
.6 ml. (⅛ tsp.) pepper
188 ml. (¾ cup) heavy cream
10 ml. (2 tsp.) Dijon mustard
5 ml. (1 tsp.) sugar

Combine all ingredients in jar with a tight-fitting lid. Shake mixture until well combined. Use as a dressing for salad greens or fresh, crisp, raw vegetables.

Yield: about 1¼-cups dressing.

MARY MOORE

Airline Food Dissected

Moira from Yorkton, Sask., wrote asking how I came by my Air Canada Black Forest Cherry Torte and other recipes.

I wrote and told her I picked them apart in flight and made very detailed notes and tested my guesses when I returned home. On one occasion I wrote directly to Air Canada catering kitchens for a recipe and received a one hundred-serving amount which I reduced to an eight-serving amount. I told Moira she could do that, too.

It was a cinch to dissect a salad served to me on a flight to Miami in January. It was a welcome change from the greens we toss together so I made it from my notes when I reached my friend Margaret Brunt's home in Pompano.

I have another Air Canada idea — a dessert that you will welcome.

IDA SALAD

½ c. finely chopped inner celery
½ c. coarsely chopped pecans
½ c. crumbled, fried bacon (about 4 or 5 strips)
Herb French Dressing (see below)

Combine lettuces, celery, pecans and crumbled bacon. Toss with Herb French Dressing made by shaking together ½-cup oil, 3 tablespoons vinegar (preferably wine) or lemon juice, ¼-teaspoon dried basil, 1 tablespoon finely chopped green onion, 1 tablespoon water, ½-teaspoon salt, ⅛-teaspoon, coarsely ground black pepper and 1-tablespoon finely chopped fresh parsley.

ORANGE CREAM TARTS

Eight 3½" tart shells 1" deep.

FILLING
(Simple Cornstarch Pudding)

2 c. milk
4 tbsp. cornstarch
2 tbsp. sugar
⅛ tsp. salt
¼ c. cold milk (second amount)
½ tsp. vanilla

TOPPING

Two 10-oz. cans Mandarin Oranges, drained.

To make the Tart Shells use your finest pastry and bake in large, custard cups. (You need almost all of the amount for pastry for a two-crust pie.)

To make the Filling heat milk in top of double broiler over boiling water. Mix together, dry, the cornstarch, sugar and salt then stir in ¼ c. cold milk to make a smooth paste.

Stir into hot milk in double boiler until thick and one minute longer. Remove from heat, stir in vanilla and cool and turn into prepared tart shells. Cover tops completely with drained mandarin orange sections in concentric circles. These may be made 2 or 3 hours in advance for, as you know, on airlines out of necessity they are made in advance and loaded onto planes before departure and often wait 2 or 3 hours before trays are passed.

Winona Pugh and the van she uses to present her program

YM-YWCA Heart Program Helps Keep Islanders Fit

elizabeth forbes

A fitness involvement training program (FIT) funded by the B.C. Heart Foundation and directed by Victoria YM-YWCA, is halfway through the year it was originally planned to function.

And according to Winona Pugh, project director, it is becoming increasingly active "in a wide variety of services ranging from large displays in shopping areas to informal testing programs for individuals."

She tells you a great percentage of people can be influenced by providing services to areas where the public congregates, such as community recreation centres, shopping centres and among employee groups.

That, of course, is what FIT is all about. To provide motivation and education for as many people as possible, and especially families and adults.

In most instances, Miss Pugh presents this program from a van that carries a portable display and audio-visual materials.

In the past six months she has travelled with that van to many places on Vancouver Island.

It's a one-person presentation, she explains, with an assist from dedicated volunteers representing the B.C. Heart Foundation, whenever help is needed.

She goes into tiny communities to distribute program information and to promote involvement in activities; into heavy people-traffic areas such as shopping malls, offices, community centres, and to conferences and organization meetings to provide current and accurate material about fitness and related subjects such as nutrition, stress and heart disease.

In this capacity she has been in practically every city, town and rural community from Victoria to Campbell River.

Measurements of blood pressure have been taken, body composition, fitness and nutrition and living habits checked. Counselling has been offered to interested sectors of the public.

A variety of fitness assessments, primarily for motivational purposes, have been provided.

Lectures have been given and presentations and displays set up for employee groups and service clubs.

Nothing is done in the van itself, Miss Pugh told me. "We do not have room in there, nor the proper equipment, so everything must be brought out and set up outside the van."

In this way, she added, "while reaching hundreds of individuals, we have also been able to assist local community recreation programs by educating and urging these groups to adopt a more active lifestyle."

That lifestyle, as she sees it, "places fitness as a top priority for future enjoyment and physical well-being and, hopefully, to reduce the possibility of heart disease.

Recent studies have demonstrated a relationship between the physical condition of the body and resistance to heart disease, she pointed out.

"This indicates a need to educate and motivate people to improve the level of physical fitness."

That is one of the prime reasons the B.C. Heart Foundation, after four years of study and preparation, expanded into the field of preventive medicine, through funding of the FIT project.

In this joint effort the Heart Foundation and the Victoria YM-YWCA are now cooperating to prevent cardiovascular disease, which affects four out of every 10 Canadians.

"Our complicated living habits and sedentary occupations have led to negative lifestyle patterns," Miss Pugh explained.

"Adequate activity is no longer available to the average individual.

"Physical fitness is recognized as a major factor in reducing the risk of many major diseases and in increasing individual productivity and potential."

Then she issued a warning.

"The correct approach and practice of fitness principles are necessary to promote a change to an active lifestyle."

This is where FIT comes in. Its objectives are to provide the education and motivation necessary to create a permanent activity program.

The FIT van will travel to any location, anywhere on Vancouver Island or adjacent islands, where people indicate a concern with improving the quality of life.

That means, Miss Pugh said, to schools, community recreation centres, industrial and commercial agencies, shopping centres, private clubs and organizations, and even attendance at conferences and conventions.

Right now she has an invitation to take the van to Port Hardy and Port Alice "as soon as weather permits."

She will also make a second visit to Campbell River soon and this will give her a chance to follow up contacts as well as to meet new people.

Further information as to how you can have the van — and Miss Pugh — visit your organization, shopping mall or your community, can be obtained through FIT, Victoria YM-YWCA, 880 Courtney St., Victoria, V8W 1C4, phone 386-5711, or the B.C. Heart Foundation, 1008 Blanshard St., Victoria, V8W 2H5, phone 382-4035.

In every country around the world, cereals make up a sizeable part of the daily diet. In Canada, wheat, oats and barley are the main cereal crops produced for human consumption. These cereal grains are processed into various kinds of flour and meal, breakfast cereals, bakery products and pasta.

The 16-page pamphlet Cereals Anytime shows you the nutritional value of more than 30 cereals like wheat germ, rolled oats, cooked cornmeal and shredded wheat. it also states that whole grain cereals usually cost less per serving than those ready-to-eat. Cereals packed in individual servings are usually the most expensive and those that need to be cooked the least expensive. There are also instructions on how to cook breakfast cereals by the direct heat and double boiler methods as well as serving suggestions.

In addition, you will find dozens of recipes for soups, quick breads, main course dishes, desserts and snacks. Among the main course recipes are directions on how to add oats when you make meatballs and crushed cereal flakes when you want to make crispy baked potatoes. Furthermore, you are told how to use cereals as a topping for casseroles, to enhance the flavor of baked tomatoes and to make crispy baked chicken.

'Friendly' Style Rubs Wrong Way

DEAR ABBY: An elderly woman signed HAD MY SAY resented being addressed by her first name by doctors and their nurses. (She said it was rude and demeaning.) You defended the practice saying it is not intended as an insult or a put-down, but is considered "friendlier" than the more formal "Miss, Mrs. or Mr."

I disagree. I was brought up differently, and I cannot get used to hearing a secretary, receptionist or salesperson call me anything but "Madam" or Mrs. ———," if they know my surname. Being called "Honey" or "Dearie" by salespeople is also irritating. Familiarity breeds contempt, and I shan't go back to a place where first-name basis is the policy.

Thank you for lending me your ear. This problem has bothered me ever since I came to America. And my children have never been allowed to call my friends by their first names either!

FROM ENGLAND

DEAR FROM: Although Long Beach is a long reach from England, read on for a reader who shares your view:

DEAR ABBY: I take strong issue with your comments on the letter from HAD MY SAY, who was rankled by the medical profession's practice of using the first names of their patients.

"Friendlier," as you call it, seems to be a two-way street. Never have I had a doctor or nurse suggest that I reciprocate; indeed, I believe they would not invite such friendliness except from those whom they know socially.

MRS. M. IN LONG BEACH

DEAR MRS. M. AND FROM ENGLAND: My mail has been running 5 to 1 in favor of first names. Residents in nursing homes say it makes them feel more at home.

So I suggest that those of you out there who resent being addressed by your first names, speak up. The squeaking wheel gets the grease.

DEAR ABBY: To HAD MY SAY, who resents being called by her first name, I say, "Right on!" And it's not a question of age. It's undue familiarity, demeaning and disrespectful.

I know a woman who handled it this way: During her first visit to a doctor she had never seen before, he asked, "Mary, does this hurt?"

She replied, "Yes, Jack."

After that he called her "Mrs. Smith."

OLYMPIA

DEAR ABBY: Now that HAD MY SAY has had her say about people who call her by her first name, we'd like to have OUR say on the subject.

We are all residents of the Fountain Convalescent Hospital in Orange, Calif., and we think surnames are too formal. We prefer to be called by our first names. Thank you.

Nutrition Buyline

Question: My children would like me to purchase a type of bar which they have seen advertised on television. It's similar to a chocolate bar but also contains such ingredients as granola. Is it a good snack food?

Answer: In looking at the package label you will find that the major igredients included in most of these bars is sugar or sugar-like substances such as honey or corn syrup. Remember, ingredients are listed in a descending order. Snacks with a high sugar content are not recommended by nutritionists and dentists. Fresh fruit and vegetables, cheese, nuts, unsweetened fruit juices would be better snack choices.

Answer: The inability to adapt readily to seeing in the dark, a condition called night blindness, not poor eyesight, is an indication of a shortage of vitamin A in the body. The average Canadian diet is not deficient in Vitamin A. The only group found to have a moderate vitamin A deficiency in the Nutrition Canada Survey was pregnant Indian and Eskimo women.

The best source of vitamin A is liver and it is also found in dairy fats and egg yolk. Vegetables and fruits such as carrots, sweet potatoes, tomatoes, peaches, cantaloupe, broccoli and spinach contain large amounts of carotene which the body changes to vitamin A.

Question: Is raw sugar more nutritious than refined sugar?

Answer: Raw sugar is essentially the unrefined sugar crystals extracted from sugar cane or beet sugar. The traces of minerals in raw sugar add little to the total daily needs. Therefore, neither raw or refined sugar can be considered a nutritious food stuff.

Chubby Children Become Fat Adults

By Dr. JEAN MAYER
and Dr. JOHANNA DWYER

Food for Thought

More than ever before, North Americans today are losing "the battle of the bulge," according to a recent medical study. And by the time they reach middle age, most of them are 10 per cent or more over their desired weight. Although obesity is a complex problem that is not fully understood, there is good evidence that obesity begins in childhood and that heredity is a chief cause of overweight. Or, to put it more accurately, heredity appears to determine the tendency to become overweight.

But even if a person has a genetic tendency to put on extra pounds, it's his life style — how much he eats, how much he exercises, his food preferences and the use of food for emotional purposes or rewards — that is the major determinant of whether or not he is going to be overweight. Very few babies start life overweight; if they do, often it is a sign that the mother has diabetes. Nevertheless, within a relatively short time, a large number of children are on the road to lifelong obesity.

Most overweight children have overweight parents. Studies have found that in the United States, for example, that if both parents are of normal weight, only seven per cent of their children are overweight. If one parent is overweight, the figure rises to 40 per cent. And if both parents are overweight, virtually all of their children also are fat.

What should you do if your child appears to have a weight problem? The first step is to consult a doctor. If the youngster is in the 8-to-14-year age group, it could well be that the extra weight is normal "puppy fat" that will be outgrown as the child matures. Obesity also may be a sign of underlying disease.

In most instances, however, weight problems can be attributed to eating habits, lack of physical exercise, or emotional problems that lead to overeating.

Although overeating seems the most obvious cause of childhood obesity, our studies have found that the real culprit is probably a combination of diet and lack of exercise. For instance, when we studied the eating habits of a group of overweight Boston school children and compared them with those of their normal-weight peers, we found that in many instances the overweight children actually consumed less food than the others. But they also were considerably more sedentary, that is, they did not burn up the calories taken in. So one of the first steps in assessing the cause of obesity in a youngster should be to look at both his food intake and his exercise level.

The type of food consumed is important, especially if the youngster is relatively sedentary. If this is the case, foods that are high in calories but low in nutrients—the "junk" foods like cakes, cookies and soda pop—should be eliminated in favor of more nutritious, low-calorie foods, such as fruits, juices, lean meats and whole-grain breads and cereals (not the sugar-coated kind, however).

Avoid putting the youngster on a crash diet to lose weight. This could stunt growth, cause menstrual irregularities and lead to emotional problems. Instead, make sure that he or she eats a balanced, nutritious diet that provides adequate calories and nutrients for normal growth.

Next, encourage more exercise. This is the most crucial factor in dealing with overweight during childhood. If the child gets enough exercise, he will eventually grow into his weight as he gains in height but not in pounds. In a four-year study that we did several years ago in Boston, we found that fat children who exercised regularly did slim down.

The type of exercise is unimportant—it is intensity and continuity that count. For exercise to be effective, it should be done for at least an hour on weekdays and three hours a day on weekends. The exercise should be a joy, rather than drugery, and preferably something that can be done throughout life by every member of the family. Swimming, hiking, bicycling, jogging, tennis, cross-country skiing and other active sports, such as squash or paddleball, are but a few examples of enjoyable forms of exercise.

There is, of course, another aspect of being overweight that should not be ignored. The fat child is often the brunt of teasing by other children, and parents may unwittingly add to the child's emotional and social problems by making derogatory comments about the youngster's appearance or applying too much pressure on him to lose weight. Many overweight youngsters already have a low opinion of themselves, and it is important to reassure the child that he is loved and esteemed.

By understanding the multifaceted nature of childhood obesity and working to alter the lifestyle that contributes to it, parents can help their children to solve their weight problem before it becomes a lifelong handicap.

Too Old for Pediatrics?

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

I'm 16 years old. Whenever I get ill my mother still sends me to see the pediatrician who has always taken care of me. Don't you think it's about time that I should have a "grown-up" doctor to whom I could tell my problems without feeling that I'm still a child? — Miss B.J.

Dear Miss J.:

Many families are reluctant to give up the pediatrician with whom their children have developed a long-standing relationship. Some teenagers, in fact, feel more comfortable in this relationship, too, and enjoy continuing it.

Pediatricians often try to "wean" their patients away from this dependence and would prefer that the adolescent be examined and treated by a doctor who takes care of adults.

There are, in fact, some doctors who specialize in adolescent medicine. Their training and interest in these young people places them in an obvious position of advantage. Since this is a new specialty, it is not likely that one would find such a doctor in every community..

Many doctors who take care of adults have excellent psychological insight into the special needs of adolescents as they pass through this period into young adulthood.

I most certainly agree that it is time for you to "graduate" from the pediatrician, or child specialist, to that of the "adult" physician. This does not mean, however, that your parents should be separated from your medical needs or from any course of treatment that the doctor prescribes.

It is an excellent time for you to establish your own bond of mutual respect and understanding with your "adult" doctor. With complete confidentiality, your doctor will be "lending his ears" to you and will help clarify your emotional needs while he is solving your medical problems.

Is there any danger in having hairs around the upper lip taken off by electrolysis? Bleaching the hairs has not been very satisfactory. — Mrs. K.B.

Dear Mrs. B.:

Electrolysis is a very safe way to remove hair permanently. With a very fine needle inserted into the opening of the hair follicle, a tiny amount of electric current is passed through it. The hair at the bottom of the follicle (or the root) is destroyed and then the hair is removed with tweezers.

The key to safety is, of course, the competence of the person who is using this technique. Many states now licence electrolysis technicians only after they have satisfactorily indicated a long period of competent training.

It is very rare that there is any damage done to the skin around the hair follicle with this technique for the removal of hair.

LET THE SELLER BEWARE

EAST PROVIDENCE, R.I. — A Providence man unhappy with the new car he bought last month allegedly marched into the dealership Wednesday night and shot the service manager to death.

The victim was identified as Norman Grenier, 62.

Authorities said Guisippe Capalbo, 37, drove into Elmwood Dodge at 4:55 p.m., unsuccessfully sought a salesman or the owner of the agency and without warning, fired a .32-calibre pistol at Grenier.

East Providence police said since Capalbo bought it a month ago, he had repeatedly taken his new Dodge Magnum back to the auto agency for service.

Kidney Transplant Direct from China

SEATTLE — Yakima restaurateur Andy Chan received a kidney transplant Wednesday from a brother who travelled all the way from the People's Republic of China to free him from triweekly sessions on a kidney dialysis machine.

Both Chan and his brother, Chan Chung-hon, were in satisfactory condition after being in surgery for three and a half hours, said Bob Roseth, information specialist at University Hospital.

Because doctors thought Andy Chan's defective kidneys might be contributing to his high blood pressure, both were removed before he received his brother's kidney, Roseth said. The removal of both of the recipient's kidneys is not always necessary, he said.

Doctors said Andy Chan will remain in the hospital between two and four weeks, undergoing daily tests for possible complications, and his brother will be discharged within five days, barring complications.

The Red Cross was instrumental in gaining permission from the Chinese government for Chan's brother to leave Canton. Chan Chung-hon is trying to get Peking to grant exit visas for his wife and four children.

Chevy Divorce Suit

LOS ANGELES — Actress Jacqueline Carlin has sued comedian Chevy Chase for divorce.

Miss Carlin, 29, married the former star of the television series, Saturday Night Live, in 1976.

She filed her suit one day after the couple separated.

There was no immediate comment from Chase, 34, who, according to his wife, had threatened to smash windows and take away her belongings.

A hearing has been set for April 19.

LOVE RINGS THE BELL

NORRISTOWN, Pa. — Call Maria Victor lovesick. Call her persistent. Call her desperate. But don't call her beloved Jerry Marinucci, she's already done that 1,400 times.

Authorities said the 23-year-old Philadelphia woman developed a crush on Marinucci, 44, a guard at the Montgomery County prison, and just wouldn't take no for an answer.

Within a three-month period, she called her heart throb 1,400 times, according to a harassment complaint filed by Marinucci.

He said he got 400 calls in one week at his home before changing his telephone number. The calls then came to the prison — 800 in 12 days "at extremely inconvenient hours," the complaint said.

Then Marinucci made a call — to police.

Ms. Victor pleaded guilty this week to harassment and was sentenced to three years probation and $500 fine. Judge Horace Davenport told her she would be sent to prison if she resumed her phone campaign.

But not the Montgomery County prison, the judge added.

WAYNE GETS TO HIS FEET AND TAKES A LITTLE FOOD

BOSTON (AP) — Movie star John Wayne got to his feet Wednesday for the first time since open-heart surgery and ate his first solid food, Massachusetts general hospital said.

And he thanked the thousands of fans who have sent him get-well wishes.

"Mr. Wayne's convalescence continues on schedule," said Martin Bander, a spokesman for the hospital. "He feels more rested."

Bander said the actor "thanks all the thousands of people from all over the world who have sent messages, cards, flowers and gifts."

President Carter and Bob Hope have been among those who sent their best. The lastest get-well message came from the Massachusetts Senate.

It passed a resolution Wednesday praising Wayne for his acting ability and his "meaningful contributions to politics."

Bander said respiratory therapists worked on the actor Wednesday to keep his lungs free of secretions.

Doctors said the impaired circulation caused by the damaged mitral valve weakened Wayne and impaired his breathing.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

The bridge expression, "a fixing," might be described as the procurement of a bad result through no fault of one's own. "Fixing" situations come into being when an opponent makes an abnormal bid or play which is not correct according to the textbooks, but which achieves the optimum result.

Today's deal might be described as "half-a-fixing": the defenders got "robbed," but they were equally responsible for their plight. The hand was played in the 1972 National Championships.

Neither side vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	2 ♣
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣.

After winning the opening lead with his club king, upon which East played the five, West led a diamond to dummy's queen at trick two. The ace of trumps was cashed next, West dropping the nine. Now came the seven of trumps, and when East played the five-spot, South followed with the four. When the seven won the trick, South picked up East's two remaining trumps. He eventually established a diamond by ruffing a diamond. The rest of the tricks were his.

At the conclusion of play, East inquired of Declarer: "How come you took the deep trump finesse?" Declarer answered: "Well, if trumps broke 3-2, which they figured to do, then all those declarers who arrived at a six-heart contract would make a slam. Since we weren't in a slam, I assumed that the slam was unmakable by normal play. So I played abnormally."

Actually, the defenders could have prevented declarer from making 12 tricks. Had East played the nine of clubs at trick one, West would have construed this play as a desire to have clubs continued. West would then have led the club ace at trick three, dummy ruffing.

With the doubleton A-7 of trumps remaining in dummy, when declarer later led the trump seven, East would have put up the ten. East, with the guarded jack of trumps remaining, now couldn't be prevented from making a trump trick.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): New Moon position highlights property, solidity, ability to close a deal. Build on solid structure. Create your own traditions. Respect experience, but don't be bound into corner because of it. Meaning will be clarified. Leo, Aquarius persons could be part of scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emphasis on sorting out ideas, being selective, choosing quality. Relatives, close neighbors play more of a role than in recent past. Movement, messages, mail, short trip figure prominently. Remain flexible.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): You locate lost article. You collect debt. You get better financial deal than anticipated. You have greater freedom to test concepts, theories. Travel is in picture — you could win a contest.

IF APRIL 7th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are fiercely independent, an individual to your fingertips, spiritual, a perfectionist. You can fall victim to brooding, self-deception. You tend to idealize people. You are inventive, introspective an few know the "real you." Pisces, Virgo people play important roles in your life. Oscar-Winner Green To Conduct the VSO

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

With thousands of dollars worth of advertising spent and thousands of dollars worth of tickets sold, word was received that Andre Kostelanetz was ill and his appearance with the Victoria Symphony next weekend had been cancelled.

The emergency demanded speedy and well-directed action, which it got, and another celebrity in popular music, John Green, multi-Oscar-winning arranger-composer and former MGM musical director, will arrive momentarily to take over the concerts.

The program — advertised as all-Tchaikovsky, will change — although two of the master's best loved works, the Romeo and Juliet Fantasy Overture and Capriccio Itaienne, are included.

Other popular classics to be played are Dvorak's Carnival Overture, Puccini's Intermezzo from Manon Lescaut and the Espana Rhapsody by Chabrier.

The second half of the program will reflect Green's glistening career in filmmaking. His five Oscars included the one for his arrangement and direction of Leonard Bernstein's West Side Story score and the Suite for Orchestra from this score will be performed.

Also included is his Three Themes for Symphony Orchestra based on his original score for the film Raintree County.

A special concert feature which Green loves to include and audiences adore, is a number entitled Evergreens, in which the composer emerges as Green, seated at the grand piano, performs some of his most famous songs — classics like I Cover the Waterfront, and Body and Soul.

In the 30s Green was working with Maurice Chevalier amongst others, and in the 50s he conducted the MGM Symphony on the first issued long-play records. During his years as MGM's musical arranger, director and composer, Green was nominated time and again in the Oscar race.

He actually won for, besides West Side Story, Easter Parade, American in Paris and Oliver! He is also proud of the fact that he discovered and guided Andy Previn in the latter's early years.

UVIC ORATORIO ON WEEKEND

The music department at UVic has been in existence for 10 years and over that decade Victoria audiences have been treated to a number of large-scale choral works highlighted by exceptional guest soloists.

Music lovers will remember such masterpieces as Carmina Burana by Carl Orff; King David by Honegger; Bach's B minor Mass; Haydn's Lord Nelson Mass; Walton's Belshazzar's Feast, and Requiems by Brahms, Faure, Verdi and Mozart.

On Saturday and Sunday, the University chorus and orchestra will be performing A Child of Our Time, an oratorio by the English composer, Sir Michael Tippett.

Four guest soloists will be featured in this work which expresses in its music and poetry, both by Tippett, an impassioned protest against persecution and tyranny.

The second work to be presented will be Beethoven's Choral Fantasy for Piano, Chorus and Orchestra, Op. 80, for which well-known pianist Robin Wood will be the soloist. The fantasy was composed when Beethoven was 38 and is based on a song he had written in his early youth.

The pair of concerts, continues the tradition of the Taylor Scholarship Concerts from which all proceeds go to a scholarship fund for talented students of the department.

They will take place in the Old Gym on UVic campus and this will be the last time that audiences will attend such concerts in this location or at Christ Church Cathedral where some previous concerts have taken place.

All future such events involving the University Chorus and Orchestra will be presentedin the beautiful new concert hall in the University Centre which will be officially opened on Sept. 29.

Saturday's concert will commence at 8 p.m. and Sunday's at 2:30 p.m.

Vlahovic Inquiry Completed

Industrial relations officer Colin Kay has completed his investigation into the internal union trial of Jack Vlahovic, deposed secretary-treasurer of Local 213 of the Teamsters.

Labor Minister Allan Williams said he has received the report, which he described as voluminous, but did not say if he would make its contents public.

When Williams appointed Kay last September, the labor minister indicated he expected the inquiry to be completed within three days.

Vlahovic, deposed after a trial panel found him guilty of contravening union bylaws, also was barred for life from holding any union office, fined $1,000 and ordered to reimburse the union almost $10,000 for what were alleged to be unauthorized expenditures.

He is awaiting the results of an appeal of his case made before an international Teamsters trial panel.

Housing Grants Made

The provincial government said Wednesday it has approved capital grants for senior citizen housing projects in Dawson Creek and Creston.

The government said in news releases it would provide $353,000 to the Rotary Harbor Society of Dawson Creek for 37 self-contained units, and $117,000 to the Creston Trinity Housing Society for construction of a 19-unit project.

The grants represent one-third of the capital costs.

Sidney Loses Artifacts

A collection of B.C. Indian artifacts has been sold for $9,000 to a private collector on the Saanich Peninsula.

Sidney council last year was prepared to buy the collection owned by antique storeowner and former Sidney alderman Gib Baal but backed off because it might have constituted a conflict of interest because Baal would profit from the transaction with the town.

At the time Baal was chairman of the finance committee.

Baal said the town could have bought the collection for $6,000. The artifacts would have been placed in the Sidney Museum.

He said the private collector did not want to be identified but he (Baal) had been assured the artifacts will remain in Canada.

Collards: Different Greens

The vegetable named Collards does not appear to be widely grown by home gardeners, many having the impression it is a collective name for members of the cabbage family. Dictionaries are not too helpful when the definition is "a form of cabbage," or simply "a colewort."

One dictionary is more specific. It attributes the word to U.S.A. as a mispronounciation of colewort, being first recorded as "colert" and later as "colerd".

Colewort is any cabbage which does not produce a head, and Collards are a specific vegetable within this group.

Very little is known of the history of the crop, but since it is a form of cabbage it is considered to have originated in the British Isles and western Europe.

In appearance it might be likened to a tall growing Kale; it never forms a head, it withstands a wide range of temperatures and grows in all types of well drained soils containing an abundance of compost.

Collards should be of interest to today's home gardeners who are growing vegetables for the food values lacking in commercially produced crops, and are also interested in providing variety to the meals they prepared for their families.

As a food, Collards compare favorably with cabbage, turnip greens, and spinach, excelling these crops in protein, fats, carbohydrates, and being equal in mineral and vitamin content. They are rated high in vitamin A, a good source of B1, B2, and C, with 1.2% fibre, 1.2% sugar and 0.2% starch, in addition to small amounts of calcium and iron.

The plants may be harvested at any time of year and at any stage of growth. Being a cool season crop it increases rapidly in growth during the cooler weather of spring and fall, and a touch of frost is said to improve its quality.

Maturity varies from 65 to 80 days, but thinnings can used and picking can start after 60 to 70 days from seeding.

There are three accepted ways of harvesting collards. The first is to cut off the entire stalk just below the crown when the plant has attained a height of from ten to fifteen inches. The second is to cut off only the rosette, or mature head; the third is to pull off the lower leaves (as with kale) and leave the younger leaves for picking at a later date.

For an early crop seed is sown in a coldframe, or seed box, four weeks before the normal time for outdoor soil preparation.

In areas with temperate summer heat seed is sown thinly outdoors for plants to stand five to six inches apart, the last sowing being made in late August.

Seed of Collards is not included in all seed displays, nor is it handled in large quantities because it is not in great demand.

One local seed company packages the variety Georgia Whitehead and has it in displays, and a leading Canadian seed grower lists the variety Vates, a special strain developed by the Virginia Truck Experimental Station, describes as "more compact and uniform."

EXPERTS SET FOR TV DRAMA

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — After-effects from the upcoming televison special Holocaust — depicting the murders of Jews during the Second World War — are seen as so potentially upsetting that psychiatrists, teachers and other professionals have readied themselves with workshops on how to explain it.

NBC will televise the much-publicized, four-part series April 16-19.

Some 800 people, including teachers, rabbis, social workers, psychologists and psychiatrists, attended the Wednesday night workshops, sponsored by the Chicago Board of Jewish Education and the Associated Talmud Torahs, a Jewish educational agency.

Gov't Protests Lenient Sentence

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. justice department Wednesday took the unprecedented step of urging a federal judge in Houston to correct what it termed the "illegal" and inappropriately lenient sentence he imposed on three former police officers convicted in the death of a Mexican American.

The men were found guilty of violating the civil rights of Joe Campos Torries, who drowned last May after he was beaten and thrown into a bayou while a prisoner.

They were tried on federal charges under the Carter administration's new "dual prosecution" policy because the justice department was dissatisfied with minor state convictions.

U.S. District Court Judge Ross Sterling sentenced the men to one year in prison on a misdemeanor charge and suspended a 10-year sentence on a felony conviction.

The judge could have imposed life sentences on the latter charge, but placed the men on five years' probation instead, he said, because they did not intend to kill Torres, a 23-year-old Vietnam Veteran.

Chile to Free Political Prisoners

SANTIAGO (Reuter) — Chile will soon free or exile all prisoners convicted of crimes against state security, President Augusto Pinochet has announced.

In a 30-minute broadcast Wednesday night, the military leader also said that civilians would be asked to play a much larger role in government although political power would remain in the hands of the armed forces. He did not elaborate.

The military government has recently relaxed emergency measures — including a nightly curfew and the right to hold people indefinitely without trial — imposed after it overthrew the Marxist government of President Salvador Allende in 1973.

Many leftists were killed and thousands jailed in the aftermath of the coup, prompting wide international condemnation of the suspension of rights and frequent reports of torture.

Pinochet said it was incorrect to describe people convicted of crimes against the state as political prisoners.

But he said the decision to release them was "inspired by humane motives so that nobody can say from now on that there are people in Chile deprived of their freedom because of political incidents that happened in the past."

Soviets, Cuba Lashed Over Activities in Africa

LONDON (Reuter) — British Foreign Secretary David Owen has sparked a fierce diplomatic row over a sharp denunciation of Soviet and Cuban roles in Africa.

Owen said in a dinner speech Wednesday there would be serious complications for Africa if Cuba became involved in Rhodesia, Namibia (South-West Africa) or Eritrea.

He also blamed the Soviet Union for the war in the Ogaden region of Ethiopia. He said that in Ethiopia's northern province of Eritrea, Cuban troops were becoming involved in what was essentially a problem of internal security.

Ethiopian Ambassador Ato Ayalew Wolde-Giorgis walked out half-way through the speech.

"The foreign secretary's speech was completely distorted about the position in Africa," said Soviet envoy Nikolai Lunkov.

Cuban Ambassador Jorge Bolanos said he would seek an early meeting with Owen "to put the correct facts to him."

Lunkov told reporters: "The Soviet Union was the only country which tried to persuade the Somalia leaders from an act of aggression.

"If the Western governments had supported the Soviet Union, we would not be in the position we are today."

In his speech, Owen said Cuba once supported the Eritrean secessionists. "The Eritreans are suddenly spoken of as pawns in the imperialist game and we may yet see Cuban combat troops fighting the very fighters they have previously supported," he said.

Owen said any attempt to use Cuban forces to undermine talks aimed at bringing peace and democracy to Rhodesia and Namibia would mean severe complications for Africa and East-West relations.

As long as Cuban forces remained in Africa, presumably with the support of the Soviet Union, there would be the temptation to use them in new situations, Owen said.

He estimated there were 16,000 Cuban troops and advisers and 1,000 Soviet military personnel in Ethiopia. There were 20,000 Cuban troops and advisers in Angola and several hundred elsewhere in southern Africa, he said.

$3.5M TAKEN IN $125M SUIT

SANTA ANA, Calif. (UPI) — A man who won a $125 million judgment against Ford Motor Co., believed the largest personal injury settlement ever, agreed Wednesday to accept $3.5 million rather than go through another trial.

Ford, which had asked for a new trial in the case, has 30 days to appeal the decision. If Ford does not appeal, Richard Grimshaw, 18, Anaheim, Calif., will recive a total of $6,341,000 in actual and punitive damages.

Grimshaw suffered severe burns over 80 per cent of his body in a 1972 automobile accident. The fuel tank of the Pinto he was in ruptured in the accident and he was covered with burning gasoline.

His attorneys charged that Ford sold the cars even though the company knew the fuel tanks could be ruptured by the slightest rear-end collision.

On Feb 6, after a six-month trial, a jury awarded Grimshaw $2,841,000 in actual damages and $125 million in punitive damages. Attorneys said that is what it would have cost Ford to recall the faulty cars.

The jury also awarded $666,280 in actual damages to the family of another victim who died in the crash. No punitive damages are allowed in a wrongful death case.

Ford has lost previous similar lawsuits — a $3.3 million judgment in Florida in 1975; a $1.2 million judgment in Alabama in 1976, and a $675,000 judgment in Virginia in November.

Six More Ferries For Wash.

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — The Washington department of transportation today signs the largest contract in state history, approving construction of six new 100-car ferries for $105.8 million.

Transportation Secretary William A. Bulley and Peter Woeck, the president of Marine Power and Equipment Co. of Seattle, will sign the contract.

The ferries will be financed by a bond issue and a 10-percent increase in the motor vehicle excise tax.

DELHI BELLY BEATEN?

BOSTON (AP) — Doctors report that regular doses of a seldom-used antibiotic can prevent Montezuma's Revenge, the perennial intestinal affliction of tourists in underdeveloped lands.

The researchers said the drug can give most people at least one month's protection against the unpleasant malady, also known as Delhi Belly, or simply traveller's diarrhea.

Margaret to Return To Her Royal Duties

LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret is not planning to withdraw from public life and will resume her official engagements as soon as she recovers from the flu, the royal court correspondent for the British news agency Press Association said today.

The 47-year-old princess has been sharply criticized in recent weeks for her relationship with playboy Roddy Llewellyn, a brewery heir and aspiring nightclub singer 17 years her junior, and for what her critics say is her inattention to public duties.

But the Press Association's court correspondent, Grania Forbes, noted that while the criticism drawn by the Queen's younger sister almost certainly will be discussed, no one will ever know because the prime minister's talks with the monarch have always been kept private.

She missed the confirmation into the Church of England of her daughter, Lady Sarah Armstrong-Jones, and three children of other royalty. A statement from Margaret's Kensington Palace home said: "Against her personal wishes but on the strict advice of her doctors, Princess Margaret was prevented from attending the service."

She and Snowdon were married in 1960 and separated March 16, 1976.

Davis's Firing Tops Agenda For Cabinet

The cabinet went into an early-morning session today and it was understood one of the main items on the agenda was the firing of Jack Davis.

The 7 a.m. session got underway with Premier Bill Bennett and Attorney-General Garde Gardom still refusing comment on Wednesday's statement by Davis that he believes his firing stemmed from an investigation into airline tickets.

Gardom, who was slated to make an announcement today on the Davis probe after receiving a report from Deputy Attorney-General Richard Vogel, said he is unsure when he will get the report.

Up until Wednesday, Davis, Gardom and Bennett had refused to say what the investigation involved.

"I believe that this investigation has to do with first class air tickets which I as a minister am given by government," Davis said in a prepared statement.

"I don't like travelling first class," he said. "I switch to economy class whenever I can."

Davis said the number of trips involved was eight or nine, and all were on government business.

The cost of a return air ticket between Victoria and Ottawa is $428 economy or $684 first class, a difference of $256.

The excursion rate, which requires a minimum stay of seven days and a maximum of 30 days is $245, a difference from the first class fare of $439.

Davis said he made the disclosure because of the distress and misery which reports of being locked out of his office and other speculation in the press is causing to his family.

Otherwise, the deputies and aides travel economy, he said.

A spokesman in the energy, transport and communications minister's office said normal procedure was followed in the purchase of tickets for Davis.

PWA Provided Free Service for Socreds

Alberta Transport Minister Hugh Horner confirmed Wednesday in Edmonton that Pacific Western Airlines carried more than three tons of Social Credit campaign material free of charge during the 1975 British Columbia election.

New Democratic Party Leader Grant Notley disclosed the action in the Alberta legislature earlier Wednesday, saying that while the airline, owned by the Alberta government, gave free service to the Social Credit party, the NDP had to pay for the same service.

Horner told reporters outside the legislature that Notley had proved his case, and quipped: "Obviously it did the trick."

Notley said in the Alberta legislature the material, for which he said normal charges would have reached $1,000, was carried by PWA for B.C. Social Credit candidates including three who are now cabinet ministers.

The lone NDP member in the Alberta legislature questioned Horner about the matter and tabled a sheaf of invoices he said showed PWA had carried the material free.

While Notley was making his charges in the Alberta legislature, Dennis Cocke (NDP--New Westminster) tabled copies of the documents in the B.C. legislature alleging PWA had given the Social Credit free air space for its campaign material.

All Social Credit party officials interviewed in B.C. said they had no knowledge of the service.

However, while Cocke was making the disclosures, several government members hooted and laughed.

Ray Loewen (SC—Burnaby-Edmonds) said: "They (PWA) know leadership.There should have been more (free service)."

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Cocke was complaining because "they (PWA) didn't like you."

Cocke replied: "I thought you'd have the decency to be ashamed."

Budget Down Next Monday, Commons Told

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The government will introduce a new budget next Monday night, Finance Minister Jean Chretien announced today.

The announcement came in the Commons after the weekly cabinet meeting, at which dates for a budget and for the coming federal election campaign were believed top priorities.

Opposition critics have already largely discounted the next budget, the first full budget for Chretien, as one likely to contain pre-election goodies that might serve as a platform for the federal Liberals to take to voters.

Finance officials who are putting the budget together say it will be a "bits and pieces" budget, which means it is unlikely to satisfy the widespread demands from both opposition MPs and from business and consumer groups for a broadly stimulatory budget with substantial tax cuts.

As the Commons question period opened, opposition MPs peppered Prime Minister Trudeau with questions about the weakened national economy, contrasting it with conditions 10 years ago when the Trudeau government came to power. Today marked Thursday's 10th year as prime minister. (See also Page 7.)

Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative finance critic, noted that 10 years ago the budgetary deficit was $20 a Canadian, but now has risen to $500 a Canadian, the number of unemployed has risen from 375,000 in 1968 to more than one million and inflation is up from four per cent to more than twice that level.

Trudeau dismissed Stevens' questions as "argumentative."

Later, he charged that Stevens and John Crosbie (PC—St. John's West) were making "biased interpretations" of economic statistics, and said the government has answers that it will put forward in the budget debate.

Crosbie said that when Trudeau became the nation's leader the deficit on current account, which includes interest payments for a growing national debt, was $97 million but it rose in 1977 to $4.2 billion. And the deficit on fully manufactured products last year of $11.6 billion compares with a deficit of $4.5 billion 10 years ago, Crosbie added.

Trudeau responded that the government has created 2.3 million jobs since he took power, faster than any other industrialized country.

Underlying the Commons exchanges was a common feeling that the announcement of an election date is

INFLATION . . ? WHAT'S THAT?

TORONTO (CP) — A Gallup poll commissioned by the anti-inflation board shows that 35 per cent of Canadians feel inflation has not hurt them at all.

The survey, conducted last December, showed that 11 per cent of 1,000 persons polled said they had been helped by inflation and 19 per cent said they did not know whether they had been hurt or helped.

"We were surprised that only an average of 65 per cent of the respondents felt their personal financial position had been hurt by inflation," L. C. Morrison, the AIB's director-general of communications, said Wednesday.

Morrison said the AIB commissioned the survey to discover the attitudes and perceptions of Canadians about inflation and to see what sort of communication job the board had done in explaining the problem.

The survey showed people who felt they had been helped by inflation listed higher earnings, a better standard of living, a need to cut spending and an increase in real estate values among the advantages gained from inflation, Morrison said.

Those who said they were hurt by inflation cited a decline in spending power as their chief problem.

Morrison said the poll showed that 23 per cent — mostly the young and professionals — felt the AIB has done its job in helping them understand the causes of inflation.

Survey results show labor and wages were most blamed for inflation, while business and profits were considered the second most common cause. Government spending ranked third.

Thirteen per cent said the public lifestyle caused inflation and 12 per cent blamed a "buy today, pay tomorrow" ethic.

The survey also showed that older people blame unions more and business less for inflation, while younger people tend to blame business and labor equally.

McDERMOTT

McDermott Wins Top Labor Job

QUEBEC (CP) — Dennis McDermott was today elected president of the 2.3-million-member Canadian Labor Congress (CLC), replacing 64-year-old Joe Morris, a former British Columbia logger who has devoted his life to the labor movement since the late 1930s.

McDermott, 55, was unopposed in moving to the top labor spot after 10 years as Canadian director of the United Auto Workers. Morris decided to step down after four turbulent years as CLC president.

"I happen to believe that my time has come along and perhaps I can do the job as well as anybody else," McDermott said in an interview.

Publicly, the styles of Morris and McDermott are as different as day and night.

Morris has a low-key, slow-talking public image, while McDermott has a flare for provocative statements and fiery language.

But their philosophies are similar.

Mortgage Rate Rising

The mortgage interest rate is going up and the news for Victoria home buyers will get worse before it gets better, Canadian Real Estate Association director Eric Charman said today.

The rate is going to 10.5 per cent from 10.25 and further increases can be expected.

"We are into a period of higher rates. It could be quite a while before it is down to 10.25 per cent again," Charman said.

The mortgage rate could be at 10,75 or even 11 per cent by summer.

Charman said he expects the Bank of Canada soon will announce its third increase in its rate, forcing another round of rate increases for banks and other lending institutions. The Bank of Canada rate was 7.5 per cent on March 8 but went to 8 per cent on March 9 and then was increased to 8.5 per cent on April 3.

This forces up all other interest rates by a proportional amount.

Mortgages, however, had resisted the first bank rate increase because of the surplus of mortgage funds in most Canadian cities.

This surplus is particularly heavy in Victoria, where there has been little residential action during the past 12 months.

If the full effect of the bank rate increases had been reflected in the mortgage rate, it would have increased to 11.25 per cent by now. Financial companies have tried to avoid boosting the mortgage rate because of the low demand but with a full point being added to their cost of borrowing, they have had to pass along at least part of the cost.

Some companies have already announced increases in their prime mortgage rate to 10.5 per cent and others are expected to follow suit within a week. This means conventional mortgages will be going out at 10.5 to 10.75 per cent, depending upon the property.

He said the Victoria real estate market had shown signs of recovery this year and will continue to be fairly good, although not as strong as it would have been if the interest rate had stayed at 10.25 per cent.

Seatbelt Charge Dismissed

Greater Victoria's first charge of failing to wear a seat belt was dismissed today by Judge William Ostler.

Arthur Wagensveld, 17, was charged by Central Saanich police.

The case was thrown out by Ostler after he ruled the Crown had failed to prove the accused was not wearing the seatbelt while driving.

Wagensveld testified he had pulled into a driveway and had switched off his engine and unbuckled his seatbelt.

He said he was moving over to the passenger's side to get out because of a faulty lock on the driver's side when he noticed a police car with its lights flashing on the road.

Wagensveld said he shifted back into the passenger's seat because he assumed the police wanted to talk to him but did not re-fasten his seatbelt.

Show-Off Survives Fall from 23rd Floor

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Patrick Kouchnire was attempting to scare or impress his girl-friend when he fell from the window ledge of her 23-storey apartment into a swimming pool Wednesday night.

A hospital spokesman said Kouchnire, 24, was in stable condition with internal injuries and there were no broken bones. Falling into about a metre of water in the shallow end of the pool helped break the 64-metre plunge.

"He must have kicked against the building when he fell," a police spokesman said. "He landed in the pool, which is eight feet from the building."

Police said the fall from the apartment tower was accidental. The girlfriend tried to help Kouchnire get back inside the apartment but he slipped and fell.

Police said the man's shoes came off at the edge of the pool but there were no visible bruises when he was pulled from the water.

Indian Land Claims Boon to Lawyers

OTTAWA (CP) — Lawyers and consultants are becoming principal beneficiaries in efforts to negotiate native land claims settlements, federal figures indicate.

The figures, tabled recently in the Commons, show that millions of dollars are being paid to lawyers and consultants hired by native groups to assist with claims against the federal and provincial governments.

In northern Quebec alone, where the Crees and Inuit have signed the James Bay claims agreement, incomplete statistics show legal and consulting fees of $1.2 million. That is more than one-quarter of $4.3 million the natives borrowed from Ottawa to pursue their claims.

Those figures are not totals, however. They do not include loans or legal and consulting fees for the last 12 months, the period during which there were hectic negotiations to make the agreement final.

A breakdown shows the Inuit received $1.6 million in loans during the four-year period ended March 31, 1977, and paid $402,000 of that to lawyers and consultants. The Cree borrowed $2.7 million in the three-year period ended on the same date and paid $843,000 in legal and consulting fees.

Manitoba MP David Orlikow, the man who requested the figures, says northern Manitoba Indians paid $535,000 in similar fees in their compensation claim against the giant Nelson River power project.

"I just think that whatever the merits of trying to settle land claims, and whatever the final results . . . the lawyers will have made a bonanza," Orlikow said in an interview this week.

He requested the figures from the government to get some idea how much Indian money is being channelled to lawyers.

The figures, prepared by the Indian affairs department, really do not show the full extent of fees being paid. For instance, they show the Indian Brotherhood of the Northwest Territories paying $50,000 in fees, but do not say for what period. There also are no figures for the N.W.T. Metis Association or for the Inuit Tapirisat, the national Eskimo brotherhood.

Says Orlikow: "I don't mind when the lawyers do extremely well when their clients also are relatively well off. It bothers me that lawyers do extremely well when their clients are very poor people like the native people."

Out Goes Headmistress And In Comes Principal

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

One of the first things Christine Lurie plans to do when she becomes headmistress of Norfolk House in July is change her title to principal.

The term headmistress, traditionally associated with English-style private girls' schools, is sexist and outdated, says Lurie.

It's even possible the head of the 65-year-old school will be a man some day. Half the 34 applicants for the job were men, Lurie says.

Although she praises Norfolk House as a fine traditional school, she shows little reverence for custom.

There are definitely changes to be made, she says.

"I don't plan on going in like a bull in a china shop, but there's no way I can be like Miss Scott."

Winifred Scott is retiring after 21 years as headmistress at Norfolk. When she started, there were 87 pupils, now the school has an enrolment of 270 girls in grades one through 12.

Parents pay between $1,200 (the grade one tuition) and $1,900.

The parents come from all income levels and some must make sacrifices to sent their daughters to Norfolk House.

"They do it because they know their children will get a top-notch education," Lurie says.

The yearly fee includes a good drama and sports program, emphasis on fine arts and a process defined as character building.

Lurie, like her predecessor, believes strongly in achieving academic excellence. But she thinks the schools academic impact can be stronger, particularly in the disciplines of math and science.

A wide range of experiences should be offered to the girls; they should be encouraged to discover their full potential and develop it into satisfying lifelong careers.

"When I was going to school, a girl had two choices, she could be a nurse or a teacher," Lurie said. "A job was just something to do during the interval between school and marriage."

But Lurie is prepared to work hard to help change that. She is determined the graduates of Norfolk House will be equipped to go out into the world and master anything they set their minds on.

"I want them to know they don't have to settle for low-level jobs with low-level pay," says Lurie, who says she is not a feminist, but will fight to see women get a fair deal in the work force.

An energetic 37 year-old, Lurie is a wife and mother who has always worked as a teacher or counsellor and managed to run a home at the same time. At 30, she went back to university to complete her master's degree.

Born and raised in England, Lurie graduated from a state grammar school and went to teacher training college. At 20, she was teaching school in the slums of Manchester and Leeds.

Without a university education she was barred from teaching in high class grammar schools, so she went back to school.

She attained a bachelor of education and a masters degree after moving to Canada and worked as a high school counsellor in Calgary before moving to Oak Bay two years ago with her family.

"My friends say I chew work and spit it out."

"Miss Scott was an autocrat. She ruled with an iron rod and refused to delegate responsibility. I can't do that."

The declining enrolment problem plaguing the public school system is a perfect opportunity to attract the cream of the B.C. teaching crop to Norfolk, she believes.

Independent schools in B.C have not been affected by the declining enrolment problem. Total enrolment has been maintained at about 22,500 for the last decade.

In Greater Victoria alone there are 16 independently operated schools with a population this year of about 3,200 students.

Although salaries are not as high as in the public school system, good teachers are drawn by the school's reputation; academic freedom, small classes of about 17 students and the prospect of teaching bright girls with few distractions.

Uniforms eliminate one element of competition, the fact there are no boys in the class dispenses with another.

"The girls can devote all their energies to learning and can assert themselves as individuals and not by sex."

B.C. Eases Policy On Unwed Mothers

A provincial hospitals policy that discriminated against unmarried pregnant women has now been corrected, says Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber.

He said Health Minister Bob McClelland has agreed to rescind the policy, which for years required unmarried pregnant women newly-arrived in B.C. to wait an additional three months before becoming eligible for hospital benefits.

Barber said he pointed out the discrepancy to health officials last September and in subsequent letters, noted the policy is not followed anywhere else in Canada.

He said the practice in B.C. contradicted a 1972 federal-provincial agreement in which all provinces and the two territories agreed to provide hospital and medical benefits under the same terms and conditions to persons who take up permanent residence in another province or territory.

In a letter to Associate Deputy Health Minister John Glenwright, Barber charged the province discriminated against an unmarried pregnant woman because the regulations required she had to be a permanent resident in B.C. for six months before getting benefits.

There is only a three-month waiting period for everyone else.

In addition, he said, she had to prove she was still in the province three months after the birth of the baby, a requirement which applied to no other new permanent resident receiving hospital benefits.

Glenwright replied the unmarried mother's policy was established years ago because the majority of these women returned to their home provinces shortly after discharge from hospital.

He argued the province shouldn't have to pick up the tab for persons who have no intention of remaining here and denied any discrimination.

There was a further exchange of letters, and finally Barber wrote directly to McClelland.

The minister replied on March 21 saying he agreed with Barber that the policy is discriminatory and advised it would be rescinded.

Home Building Coming Back

Victoria housing starts are down 24 per cent this year but there are signs of a construction recovery on single family homes.

Figures released by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation today show there were 621 starts during the first three months in the Greater Victoria area, down 24 per cent from 817 in the same period one year ago.

The collapse is in apartment units with only 344 launched this year, down from 639. There were only six in March, down from 119 the previous March.

But there were 74 single family homes started during the month, up from 42 in February and well above the 35 started the previous March.

The activity reflects a reduction in the amount of surplus houses in the area. At the end of March there were 199 unsold new houses in the region, down from 240 at the same time in 1977.

There have been 165 single family homes started this year, up from 133. All of this increase occurred in March.

There have been 102 duplex units started during the first three months, up from 32 and 10 row housing units, down from 13.

The surplus new houses are mainly in Saanich where there are 78 on the market but this is down from 165 at the same time last year. There are 27 new unsold houses in Esquimalt, up from 16.

The condominum surplus has declined but this is a result of conversions to rental properties rather than by way of sales.

There are only 148 new unsold condos on the market, down form 276. But meanwhile the number of vacant rental properties has jumped to 426 from 387.

PROFESSIONAL

A four-day crafts fair which started at the University of Victoria today isn't student oriented, a spokesman said today.

Gwen Whittaker, of the Handweavers and Spinners Guild, said the UVic event will feature work by professional crafts people and not student projects as stated in Wednesday's Max Low column.

Frisbee Play Serious Ploy For Jobless

They're doing it not to show that the jobless have more fun but to let people know they are there, that they are unemployed and that their ranks are swelling every day.

The frisbee game is the first project of the Victoria Committee of The Unemployed, born at a meeting Wednesday attended by 11 people.

The games begin at 12:15 p.m. and the committee members will also distribute their first newsletter.

During Wednesday's meeting, the 10 men and one woman revealed some of the frustrations, bitterness and desperation that goes with being jobless and laid out general guidelines for action.

They included:

— an instruction program to teach people the basics of survival in the world of the unemployed — how to take advantage of various forms of assistance and what resources are available in the community;

— a political action group to lobby politicians at the municipal and provincial levels and generally keep the problem in the public eye;

— distributing a newsletter;

— holding "rap" groups and possibly counselling sessions for those who want to unburden themselves;

— setting up their own employment agency;

— discussion with the business community to see if any job-creating measures can be taken;

— contact with unemployed groups across Canada and possible formation of a national body.

John Luton, a 23-year-old unemployed University of Victoria graduate who organized the meeting, had hoped for a bigger turnout.

However, those at the meeting felt that a healthy nucleus had been formed and the committee would no doubt grow from that.

Luton opened the meeting by talking about the frustration and inadequacy that the unemployed feel and the need for some organization to help them cope.

He also said unemployment is now becoming a big issue.

"It is going to be up to the unemployed to make sure it is a daily issue."

A retired official of the department of education said the biggest problem faced by the unemployed is that they are invisible.

Society doesn't know about them thanks to welfare and unemployment insurance cheques sent through the mail.

"Maybe we should wear a uniform to make sure they know who we are," he said.

However, that prompted an unemployed professional man to say he feels useless now and wouldn't want to advertise his plight.

Another who had worked in a variety of fields stepped in and said it was time to change that attitude.

"There is nothing wrong with you," he said. "You aren't useless."

"It is the system . . . that made you think that you are useless."

Another professional man who has a temporary job now, said he was shocked last April when he found himself out of work for the first time in his life. He remained unemployed for six months and said it was a learning experience to find out that despite all his skills sometimes he didn't even get an interview for a job that was available.

He said for most jobs there are never fewer than 80 applicants.

For that reason, he added, the existing system of job hunting doesn't have much relevance.

"To go out and sell yourself is a great idea as long as 200 other people aren't doing the same thing."

One man said he always detested organizations but felt now was the time "to get my head together with other people."

The one woman in attendance has been unemployed for three years despite taking a refresher course at Camosun College in 1975. She needs a job because of a disturbing family situation. "Mentally I can't take it any more."

The committee's next meeting will take place at 2 p.m. April 19 in the Rayment Room of the Union Centre, 2750 Quadra.

AirWest Workers Still Out

Striking AirWest Airlines Ltd. employees are still off the job today as union and company negotiators continue to discuss back-to-work arrangements.

Company president Norm Gold had said earlier in the week that the 90 pilots, mechanics and clerical workers would be back on the job today following agreement on back-to-work procedures.

However, Gold's office said today meetings are still going on and there is no indication when they might end.

The employees, members of the Teamsters Union, Local 213, went on strike Nov. 13. They have ratified a new contract by an 80-per-cent margin but the terms of the agreement have not been released.

Since the strike began, AirWest management personnel have maintained a limited service on mainland-Vancouver Island flights, except for an 18-day period when the airline was grounded because of safety regulation infractions.

The employees have been without a contract since Oct. 31, 1976.

Big Wave Injures Seaman

The unidentified crew member was taken off the Diana Isle by the destroyer escort HMCS Mackenzie and taken to Esperanza Inlet for transfer to a B.C. Emergency Health Services aircraft.

The man is reported to have suffered a chest injury.

The vessel sent out a call for assistance.

The rescue co-ordination centre said two other members of the crew were not hurt and that the fishing vessel was capable of making its own way.

GUEST HOUSE REJECTED

A proposed guest house in south Oak Bay was turned down today after aldermen said it would be inconsistent with the neighborhood.

Council's zoning committee was told the building is a duplex and zoned single-family and the applicant sought accommodation for seven or eight guests.

"What she wants is a spot-zone change," said committee chairman Ald. John Goult, warning it would be a fundamental change in the character of the neighborhood and if one was allowed, it would set a precedent for others.

Ask The Times

Q. Can you tell me if using the hot water in an electric water heater will make a good tea. Why is it that no two cups of tea taste the same? R.B.S.

A. No. Fresh running water should be used and boiled before poring onto tea leaves. Making tea is an art, and a number of factors will effect the flavor. The quality of the water is one, such as well water or fresh running water from a creek. The type of teapot use is another.

Triangle Summit Purchase Expected

The provincial government has asked Parks Canada to share the cost of buying about 11 acres on the summit of Triangle Mountain near Colwood, Colwood Capital regional director Howard Drummond said today.

He said Esquimalt Socred MLA Lyle Kahl had indicated to him the property will "probably" be purchased.

About a year ago, he said, it was also suggested that the property be bought jointly by the federal government, the provincial government and the Capital Regional District.

"But the regional district hasn't got the money," he said. "However, if the federal governments comes through with funds, we will have to re-evaluate the matter."

The land is owned by Americans.

Drummond said he was informed the owners wanted $750,000 for the property.

"I think the price is too steep," he said.

"There are other objections," he added. "The proposed park doesn't conform in size to what a regional park should be. Its use would be limited."

Residents of Triangle Mountain have campaigned for purchase of the summit cap as parkland because of the spectacular view.

The historic branch of Parks Canada is interested in the property because it was once the site of a Second World War bunker.

Drummond said some residents feel parklands funds should be spent to acquire property which would be of greater use to a larger number of people.

He cited as examples Tod Inlet, adjacent to Butchart Gardens, land surrounding Esquimalt Lagoon or waterfront property.

"Some people also say there are just as good views from Mount Blinkhorn and Mount Metchosin," he said.

Saanich alderman John Mika said one of the areas which deserve high priority in the parkland acquisition program is the Sooke Potholes.

"It is heavily used by people from the whole of the Greater Victoria area," he said.

The provincial parks department would neither confirm nor deny that the summit of Triangle is being considered as a park.

However, one park official said Recreation and Conservation Mininster Sam Bawlf did inspect the property recently.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was moderately higher in active mid-afternoon trading, spurred by sharp gains in oil issues and a two-point advance at New York.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. totalled 2.79 million shares compared with 2.97 million at the same time Wednesday.

Advances outnumbered declines 215 to 144 with 233 issues unchanged.

Prado Exploration Ltd. rose four cents to 74 cents a share on the sale of 1,000 shares following its opening resumption after announcing the possible closure of a mine owned by Cornwall Tin and Mining Corp. Prado holds majority interest in Cornwall.

Among industrials, Home Oil A shot up 1½ to $42, Home Oil B 1½ to $40½, Monarch Investments ¾ to $9, Bow Valley Industries ¾ to $26⅜ and General Motors ¾ to $70¼.

Canadian General Electric dropped ¾ to $23¼, Pancana Industries one cent to $1.74, New Providence Developments 6½ cents to 42½ cents, Wall and Redekop 15 cents to $2.60 and Brascan A ⅛ to $16.

Denison Mines gained 1¼ to $65½, Rio Algom ⅝ to $30⅝ and Roman Corp. ½ to $27. Ego Mines fell two cents to $2.88 and Anglo United Development one cent to $1.18.

Ranger Oil Canada climbed 1¾ to $31⅞, Siebens Oil and Gas 1⅝ to $35 and Canadian Superior Oil 1½ to $58½. Skye Resources slipped ¼ to $9 and Amalgamated Bonanza Petroleum ¼ to $36⅝.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market carried its recent rally into a third session today, shrugging off some mid-session selling.

Gainers held a 3-to-2 advantage over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Trading was very active. NYSE volume totaled 19.06 million shares two-thirds of the way through the session.

Analysts said there wasn't any single striking news development to explain the rally.

It began on Tuesday as the dollar staged an upturn in foreign exchange. Although the dollar has since turned erratic, however, the stock market has continued to work its way ahead.

The brief pullback in stock prices at mid-day came on the heels of a gloomy assessment of the inflation outlook issued by the Council on Wage and Price Stability, which said the underlying inflation rate seemed "hopelessly stuck" in the six to seven per cent range.

But by early afternoon the market was moving ahead again.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices were generally higher in moderate afternoon trading today on the Montreal Stock Exchange. Volume at 2:30 p.m. EST was 344,500 shares, compared with 358,600 shares traded up to the same time Wednesday. Imperial Oil A gained ⅛ at $19½, Velcro ¼ at $10¾, Gulf Oil Canada ½ at $28⅞, Carling O'Keefe 10 cents at $4.20, MacMillan Bloedel ⅝ at $18⅞ and Montreal Trust 1⅛ at $16½. Royal Bank lost ⅛ at $28⅝ and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce ⅛ at $27.

London

LONDON (CP) — Prices moved moderately higher near the close of light trading today on the London stock market. The Financial Times index was up 1.2 at 471.4 at the close. Leading industrial advanced, while mining issues closed below earlier highs.

PIZZA PIEMAN

We're expanding in B.C. and talking with business people who want a fast-food/restaurant opportunity

Restaurant-operators/real estate developers

Pizza Pieman started modestly with one outlet in Victoria. Plus some great food ideas. That was in 1966.

Opportunities exist for various types of operations.

One is our licensed Family Restaurant, with a varied menu, old-time movies, and the accent on fun.

Various concepts can be tailored to your location and market.

Interested parties should be prepared to invest between $20,000 and $50,000.

Opportunities Exist NOW for Prime Locations On Vancouver Island and in Vancouver.
